LESSON EXEMPLAR

Learning Area	EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION	Grade Level	ELEVEN
Semester	FIRST	Quarter	SECOND

I. OBJECTIVES (Identifying the Goals)

Content Standard	The learners demonstrate effective communication in social and cultural contexts through oral, written, and multimodal forms; they understand that interaction patterns reflect social roles, group norms and dynamics, and cultural diversity, and that openness, intercultural sensitivity, inclusive language, and ethical considerations foster respectful engagement with diverse communities in public settings and digital spaces.
Performance Standard	The learners are able to respond appropriately and respectfully in forums and public exchanges on social and cultural issues.
Learning Competencies	1. Demonstrate sensitivity to social roles, group dynamics, and cultural identities in face-to-face and online interactions. 2. Construct coherent arguments or narratives that reflect understanding of social responsibility, diversity, and shared values. 3. Describe how cultural awareness and sensitivity influence processes of interpretation, engagement, and expression in diverse social contexts.
COMMUNICATIVE EVENT	Writing and Delivering Speeches for School, Barangay, or Youth Assemblies

III. CONTENT (Sequencing Content)	“CULTURAL AWARENESS AND SENSITIVITY”
IV. OBJECTIVES (Setting Clear Objectives and Analyzing the Tasks)	By the end of this lesson, the learners will be able to: 1. Identify audience-specific cultural and social factors to be considered when preparing for a symposium speech. 2. Explain the importance of cultural and social sensitivity in speech communication. 3. Write a meaningful and respectful speech for a school, barangay, or youth symposium, showing awareness of different cultures and audiences. 4. Deliver speech in a symposium simulation, demonstrating respectful language, appropriate tone, and effective non-verbal cues. 5. Reflect on the effectiveness of their speech in addressing audience diversity and symposium objectives.
IV. PROCEDURES Collaborative reflection, socratic questioning, problem-based learning, lecture with guided discussion, formative feedback, differentiated instruction and real-world application, concept mapping, performance-based learning		ANNOTATION *Instruction to teacher on how to facilitate the activities. *In the Annotation, explicitly explain how the IDF is applied in each part of the lesson
A. Activating Prior Knowledge	1. Activating Prior Knowledge Activity #1: “Think, Recall, Share: How Do You Communicate?” Directions: 1. Think about the last time you interacted with different groups of people - such as your parents at home, elders in your	The activity “Think, Recall, Share: How Do You Communicate?” is designed to engage learners by activating their prior knowledge through personal reflection and collaborative sharing. It fosters inclusivity by valuing diverse real-life community, your teachers or classmates at school, or your friends online. 2. Recall how you communicated in those situations. Ask yourself: • Did you speak or act differently depending on who you were talking to? • Were the moments you adjusted your tone, language, or behavior based on the situation or the people involved? 3. Share your experience with a seatmate and discuss: a. How social roles (e.g. teacher, classmate, parent) influenced your communication b. Whether you noticed differences in how people communicate online versus face-to-face c. Times when culture (language, traditions, beliefs) affected how a message was given or received. 2. Establishing the Purpose of the Lesson Processing Questions: 1. What made you adjust your communication? 2. How do roles and culture affect how we express ourselves? 3. Why do we need to be aware of these things in group or digital interactions?	communication experiences across settings like home, school, and community. • In Step 1 (Think), learners explore past interactions, connecting them to the concept of communication sensitivity. • In Step 2 (Recall), guiding questions prompt contextual and cultural reflection on how tone and language shift across roles. • In Step 3 (Share), peer discussions build connection, validate insights, and promote empathy. This integrative and ideational activity serves as a cognitive bridge, preparing learners to engage with new concepts on effective and sensitive communication. The reflective questions are strategically designed to engage learners in discovering the purpose of the lesson on their own, making the learning process more inclusive and ideational. Rather than presenting objectives directly, these prompts guide learners to see the relevance of cultural awareness and communication sensitivity in their personal lives. Question 1 taps into learners' real-life experiences, fostering connection between personal choices and communication theories. Question 2 introduces key ideas through contextual reflection on the influence of social and cultural roles.

		Question 3 emphasizes the practical value of communication sensitivity in today's diverse environments, both physical and digital. Through this exploratory and empathic process, learners gain a deeper appreciation of the topic, laying the groundwork for integrative and meaningful learning
B. Instituting New Knowledge	1. Presenting Examples Activity: "Social Media Slip" a. The teacher presents a scenario to the whole class: "A learner posted a meme on social media that unintentionally mocked a traditional practice of an indigenous group. Some classmates found it funny, while others were offended. A heated online argument followed. The student defended their post, saying it was just a joke and that people were overreacting." b. Ask the class to reflect silently for one minute on how they would feel if they were: - The learner who posted the meme - A classmate from the indigenous group - An onlooker or neutral classmate reading the comments c. Guided Class Discussion Facilitated discussion using the following guide questions: • What cultural element was involved in this situation? • How did the lack of cultural awareness affect communication? • How could the learners have expressed themselves more respectfully? • What would a culturally-sensitive response look like in this scenario?	The activity "Social Media Slip" uses a real-life scenario to make concepts like cultural awareness and communication sensitivity more contextual and meaningful. By examining the situation from multiple perspectives, learners empathize with others, reflect on cultural impacts, and suggest respectful alternatives. This promotes critical thinking, collaboration, and connection, reinforcing the importance of culturally sensitive communication in both face-to-face and digital settings.

- Note: Emphasizing the awareness of cultural identities, especially in public forums like social media, is key to respectful and effective communication. The teacher may also link this back to real-world applications: in online discussions, public exchanges, or even classroom forums.

2. Discussing New Concepts

Activity: Guided Discussion using Venn Diagram

Directions:

1. Define the concepts – present the definitions of Cultural Awareness (knowing differences) and Cultural Sensitivity (respecting differences without judgement).
2. As a class, fill in the Venn diagram:
 - a. Left circle: unique traits of Cultural awareness
 - b. Right circle: unique traits of Cultural sensitivity
 - c. Middle: similarities between both concepts

Prompt questions:

1. Can someone be culturally aware but not culturally sensitive? Why or why not?

The “Social Media Slip” activity acts as a springboard into the Discussing New Concepts phase, guiding learners to understand and differentiate Cultural Awareness and Cultural Sensitivity through explicit definitions and a collaborative Venn diagram. This promotes inclusive, engaging, and reflective learning. The visual tool helps students connect ideas, while prompt questions encourage critical thinking and empathy, making the concepts relevant and applicable to real-life communication.

2. Why are both concepts important in communication?

3. Developing Mastery

Activity #2: “Speak with Purpose”

Directions: Begin preparing a 2-3 minute symposium speech about how cultural sensitivity can help build inclusive communities in school, at home, or in society.

Your speech must have a clear message that promotes respect and understanding of cultural differences in school, at home, or in the community.

Follow the three steps below to guide your preparation: audience analysis, outline drafting, and peer review.

Step1: Audience Analysis

- Who is your intended audience (e.g. fellow learners, barangay officials, parents)?
- What are their cultural and social backgrounds?
- What values or beliefs might influence how they receive your message?

Formative check: Teacher circulates and checks responses for audience appropriateness and depth.

Step 2: Drafting the Speech Outline

This formative assessment in the Developing Mastery stage allows learners to apply their understanding of cultural awareness and audience sensitivity. The Audience Analysis encourages contextual and ideational thinking by connecting prior discussions to real-world factors. Speech Outline Drafting supports integrative and creative communication, while Peer Review promotes collaboration, connection, and reflection. Altogether, the task helps learners craft respectful, audience-aware messages in preparation for the culminating Mini Symposium.

	Draft the basic structure of your speech using the following guide: Introduction: Hook and purpose Body: Main points (2-3 ideas), evidence/examples, culturally inclusive language Conclusion: call to action or reflection Formative check: Teacher provides feedback on organization, tone, and message clarity through verbal or written comments. Step 3: Peer Review Exchange outlines with a partner. Use a checklist to evaluate the following: • Is the speech respectful and inclusive? • Are the ideas audience-specific and sensitive to cultural contexts? • Does the tone match the purpose and setting? Formative check: Completed peer checklist and brief oral feedback shared between students.
C. Demonstrating Knowledge and Skills	1. Finding Practical Application Activity: Respect in Action Directions: Each group will complete the differentiated task that shows understanding and application of cultural awareness and sensitivity. Group #1: Role-Play Team Task: Create and perform a short role-play that shows a situation where cultural insensitivity occurs-and then how it can be handled respectfully.	The “Respect in Action” activity allows students to apply their understanding of cultural awareness in realistic and meaningful ways. Through role-play, posters, storytelling, interviews, or campaign planning, learners demonstrate how respectful communication works in different contexts. These performance tasks encourage students to use what they’ve learned in practical, creative, and socially avoid interrupting. You may agree, add insight, or offer a new perspective.

3. Evaluating Learning

Activity #3: Short Essay Writing

Directions: Write a short essay (150-200 words) responding to the question below.

“Why is it important to practice both cultural awareness and cultural sensitivity in your daily interactions at school or in your community? Support your answer with specific examples and explain how these practices can contribute to a more respectful and inclusive environment?”

Essay Scoring Rubric

Criteria	Excellent (5pts)	Satisfactory (4-3pts)	Needs Improvement (2-0pts)
Content & Understanding	Shows clear understanding of cultural awareness and sensitivity with relevant examples	Shows basic understanding with minimal examples	Ideas are unclear or off-topic; lacks understanding
Application to Real Life	Strong connection to school/community experiences	Some connection to real-life context	Little or no connection to real-life situations
Organization & Clarity	Well-organized, clear, and easy to follow	Generally clear, some lapses in organization	Disorganized or difficult to understand

4. Additional Activities

collaborative process of drawing conclusions, reinforcing shared understanding. This reflection helps them generalize the importance of respectful communication across various real-life contexts, making the learning more personal, meaningful, and enduring.

The short essay task serves as a formal assessment tool in the Evaluating Learning stage. It requires learners to demonstrate their understanding of cultural awareness and sensitivity by explaining its importance and application in everyday life. Through this reflective writing, students are assessed on their depth of comprehension, ability to relate concepts to real-life situations, and clarity of expression. The rubric ensures that evaluation is objective and aligned with the lesson’s goals, measuring both knowledge and its practical application in promoting respect and inclusivity in diverse environments.

	Activity: Cultural Show-and-Tell Directions: 1. Bring an object, photo, traditional clothing, food item (if possible), or from another culture you admire. 2. Prepare a short sharing (1-2 minutes): • What is the item or tradition? • What culture is it from? • Why is it meaningful or interesting to you? 3. Take turns presenting. Speak clearly and respectfully. Visual aids or actual items are encouraged but not required. Note: While others are sharing, listen attentively. Ask polite, curious questions after each presentation (e.g. “What does the symbol mean?” or “How is it celebrated?”) Reminder: This is a safe space. All cultures and experiences should be treated with respect, openness and appreciation.	The Cultural Show-and-Tell serves as an enrichment activity under Additional Activities, providing students with an opportunity to extend their learning in a personal and engaging way. By sharing meaningful items or traditions from various cultures, learners actively demonstrate appreciation, curiosity, and respect for diversity. This activity deepens understanding of the lesson by encouraging self-expression, peer learning, and intercultural dialogue in a safe, inclusive environment. It reinforces key concepts while allowing flexibility for students to explore cultural awareness through creative, learner-centered experiences beyond formal assessment.
