"The Bench by the Mango Tree"

By: Annabel B. Culajara (original)

Every afternoon after class, a group of students gathered under the old mango tree in Barangay Kalinaw's little square. Their unspoken routine was to unwind, chat, and listen. Anna told local stories to illustrate Muslim values. Alvi is known for his easy-going demeanor who loves to sing folk songs on guitar. Quiet yet vigilant, Mei brought homemade dumplings from her family's business to serve everyone.

On a hot Friday, they found their wooden bench broken and dangerously leaning. There was silence for a while. Fatima remarked, "We have sat here so many times. Perhaps we should reciprocate. Alvi said, we should fix this since we have been enjoying this place, it's time to take responsibility. They acted without direction. Alvi collected wood leftovers from his father's building company. From her uncle, Fatima asked for nails and equipment. Mei older brother is a carpenter who offered guidance.

Their conversations grew to cover hopes, cultural differences, and shared problems. They were bonded by respect, empathy, and communal care. In the afternoon, they were able to rebuild the bench. Their act showed how young people from various backgrounds could work hand-in-hand to finish a goal. The bench wasn't only repaired. It was rebuilt by hands, hearts, and the realization that everyone of us has responsibilities to take and tend.

4. Purpose: To instill in students the idea that social responsibility is coupled with social values.

Note to the Teacher: Were the learners able to grasp how narratives or arguments can communicate powerful social messages/responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values? If yes, proceed to Discussing New Concepts. If not, revisit or give another activity.

B.2. Discussing New Concept (Differentiated activities)

A. Key Discussion Points: SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY, DIVERSITY, SHARED VALUES, NARRATIVE, and ARGUMENTATIVE IDEAS.

Group 1: Will define key terms: social responsibility, diversity, shared values, narrative, and argumentative ideas.

Group 2: Will brainstorm and explain how writers or speakers use personal stories or structured reasoning in creating arguments to promote change or understanding.

Group 3: Will explore how language, tone, and cultural sensitivity affect the message's impact.

And Group 4: Will use a T-chart to compare narrative and argument structures.

Note: The learners will be given 5-7 minutes to do the task and 2-3 minutes to present their outputs.

After the group presentations, the teacher will ask the following questions:

1. What are your considerations in defining the terms?
2. How did the writers/authors make their message powerful?
3. How do language, tone, and cultural sensitivity affect how people perceive the message conveyed in the materials?
4. What are the similarities and differences between narrative and argument?

B. Key Discussion Points: (Differentiated activities)

Group 1: Differentiate social responsibility, cultural diversity, and shared values. Use a Venn diagram to do it.

Group 2: The group will engage in a discussion about the text's content, focusing on ideas related to social responsibility, cultural diversity, and shared values.

Group 3: Will explore how language, tone, and cultural sensitivity affect the message's impact on the readers.

We will give the learners 5-7 minutes to complete tasks 2 and 3, and 3-4 minutes to present their outputs. All groups will choose their discussant(s) to share their group's outputs with the class, and the teacher will process them.

Teacher Reflection: Were the learners able to grasp how social responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values impact one's communicative style and capacity? If yes, proceed to Developing Mastery. If not, revisit or give another activity or discussion.

B.3. Developing Mastery

A. Guided Practice:

In pairs or groups, students choose a social issue (e.g., bullying, height, weight, and ethnic discrimination; environmental care such as cleanup drives and tree planting) and brainstorm either to do any of these:

- . Students should select a personal experience related to the chosen social issue that they can develop into a narrative.

Note: Learners will write a short narrative of their experiences regarding the social issues like bullying, discrimination, and environmental care.

- b. They could present an argument that addresses the issues of bullying, discrimination, environmental care, and cultural diversity.

Use graphic organizers to help structure ideas (e.g., beginning-middle-end for narratives; claim-reason-evidence for arguments). Present your outputs in an editorial format.

	Note to the Teacher: Were the learners able to demonstrate mastery of the lesson through the given activities? If yes, let them do the guided practices and the independent practices as well. If not, give another activity that will develop the learners' mastery of the lesson. Guided Practice: Individually, students list down their responsibilities at home, in school, in the church, and in their community. After the task, the teacher will ask volunteers to share their output. Independent Practice: A. Students write a short narrative integrating: • A clear point related to a current chosen social issue. • At least one shared value they have experienced (e.g., respect, empathy). • The point should have cultural or community/social relevance. B. Students write an argumentative paragraph (about any of these: responsibility as a student, as a son/daughter, as a friend to a member of a cultural minority, or as a member of a youth organization) showing their stand on social responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values in society.
C. Demonstrating Knowledge and Skills	Finding Practical Application A. Activity Title: Community Voices: Writing for Change The learners will be divided into 4-5 groups; then, they will do the task. We will give the learners 15 minutes to complete the task and an additional 5 minutes to report their outputs.

- . Task: Learners will write a short narrative or argumentative text addressing a real-life community or school issue (e.g., bullying, environmental care, cultural misunderstanding). They will incorporate themes such as empathy, respect, and inclusivity.
- . Format Options: Poster message, blog post, social media caption, speech, or open letter.
- . Purpose: To practice applying values-driven communication to authentic situations, fostering both critical thinking and civic engagement.

B. Activity Title: My Role and My Responsibilities! (The class will be grouped into 3.)

a. Task: Learners will brainstorm a social responsibility, cultural diversity, or shared values with their group mates.

Possible topics: coastal clean-up and tree planting; respect for one's religion and belief; the impact of feeding programs on the less fortunate; donation drives for the elders' home and calamity-stricken areas such as fire, earthquake, and floods; honoring the national anthem and national flag; cultural minority practices; and social values such as pagmamano and close family ties.

Group 1 will have any topic on social responsibilities

Group 2 will have any topic on cultural diversity

Group 3 will have any topic on shared values

b. Format Options: Dramatization (the teacher may opt to use the suggested topics on Task A).

Instructions:

The teacher will divide the learners into two groups for the dramatization.

b. Learners will choose groupmates who will portray specific characters.

c. Each group will be given 10 minutes to craft the sequence of events of the dramatization.

d. Each group will be given 5-6 minutes for their drama presentation.

c. Purpose: To internalize the role of social responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values to understand the importance of becoming part of an active citizenry that is willing to take responsibility, respect cultural diversity, and share good values in the community or society.

Note to the Teacher: Were the learners able to demonstrate how narratives or arguments can effectively communicate important social responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values? If yes, proceed to Making Generalization. If not, revisit or give another activity that will help learners in applying what they have learned from the topic and from the previous activities.

2. Making Generalizations

A. Strategy: Reflective Discussion

- Prompt Questions:

- What makes an argument or narrative effective in promoting social responsibility?
- How can we use shared values to connect with people from diverse backgrounds?
- What strategies help us write a clear and respectful argumentative or narrative text about cultural and social issues?
- How does the use of literary text help in shaping your understanding of social responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values?

B. Strategy: Think-Pair-Share (Generalization Through Reflection)

Instructions:

Think: Students reflect individually on the questions:

1. What values are essential for a diverse society to live in harmony?
2. How can one show respect for the various cultures encountered in society?

3. How do verbal and non-verbal cues help in performing social responsibility?

Pair: Students discuss their reflections with a partner.

Share: Each pair shares a generalization with the class.

Example Output Title: “Respect and empathy help people understand others' cultures and avoid discrimination.”

C. Strategy: Exit Slips (One-Sentence Generalizations)

Instructions: At the end of the lesson, students write a one-sentence generalization based on what they learned. (Use $\frac{1}{4}$ sheet for your answer.)

Prompt Examples:

- “I learned that social responsibility means...”
- “A shared value that unites diverse communities is...”
- “Cultural diversity teaches us that...”
- “Learning about social responsibilities helps me in choosing my HSH strand because...”

D. Strategy: Gallery Walk: Values in Action

Instructions:

1. Post images or quotes around the classroom related to real-life acts of social responsibility or cultural respect. (Pictures of firefighters saving people trapped in a house fire, a nurse caring for the sick in the hospital, a teacher talking to a learner, a man helping an elderly person cross the street, organizations doing feeding programs, a culinary arts display, bartending, a booklet of food recipes, a bunch of business plans, samples of completed research studies, a diorama output, cell and DNA models.
2. Students walk around, reflect, and write one generalization after viewing all stations.

Example:

“Helping the elderly, recycling, and fighting racism all show how shared values work in society.”

Note to the Teacher: Were the learners able to make generalizations on what they have learned regarding how social responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values shaped their communicative competence? If not, the teacher will give additional tasks to help learners develop a concrete generalization of the lesson learned.

3. Evaluating Learning

Instructions: The learners will answer the given questions briefly in a sentence or paragraph form. Write your answers on 1 whole sheet of paper.

A. Questions:

1. What are your considerations in writing or delivering argumentative or narrative texts?
2. How do the argumentative or narrative texts enliven the spirit of cultural diversity in you?
3. How do social responsibility and shared values shape your perception towards becoming a good citizen?
4. How can one use verbal and non-verbal cues in showing respect for cultural diversity?

Grading Strategy: Teacher Evaluation Strategy

Consider the following tips in checking the students' outputs

- a. Thesis statement: Is the student's argument or main point clear?
- b. Supporting evidence: Do logic, examples, or facts support the claims?
- c. Relevance: Are they answering the question or drifting off-topic?
- d. Cultural/social insight: For topics like social responsibility and diversity, check if they show sensitivity and understanding of different perspectives.

B. A Talk Show

	Topics: Social Responsibility, Cultural Diversity, Shared Values Production: Talk show host/s, 3 interviewees, cameraman, other staff Topics: a. Social Responsibility (firefighters saving people trapped in a house fire, a nurse caring for the sick in the hospital, a teacher talking to a learner, a man helping an elderly person cross the street, organizations doing feeding programs). b. Shared Values (digital age and generational behavior, honesty is the best policy, family first-the value of love and sacrifice, kindness is contagious, together we can—unity in diversity, doing what is right—the power of responsibility, forgive and move on-the power of letting go, green choices-valuing our environment). Total Score: /50 (note: Rubrics are placed on a separate page.) Instructions: . Divide the class into three groups. . --	---

	. The learners will be graded using a rubric given on a separate page. . The teacher will give feedback on learners' performances. Note to the Teacher: Were the learners able to demonstrate learning regarding how social responsibilities, cultural diversity, and shared values shaped their communicative competence through the provided activities? if yes, please proceed to giving the learning the additional activities. 4. Additional Activities • Research and present how different cultures promote shared values like respect or empathy in storytelling or public speaking. • Complete sentence starters or guided outlines for students needing help organizing their narrative/argument. • Small-group workshop sessions focused on identifying values in sample texts and rewriting passages to reflect shared values better.
V. ASSESSMENT (Assessing Learnings)	UNIT ASSESSMENT/LEARNING OUTCOME: DEBATE ON SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY, CULTURAL DIVERSITY, AND SHARED VALUES. Instructions: 1. In this activity, the learners will be grouped into six groups; then, each group leader will pick a rolled paper containing any of these: SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY, CULTURAL DIVERSITY, AND SHARED VALUES. 2. After picking, the two groups with the same topic will draw lots to see who will represent the affirmative and negative groups for the debate. 3. All groups will be given 5-7 minutes to brainstorm.

4. Then, the affirmative group will construct a proposition.

5. Each group will be given 7-10 minutes to prepare.

6. The debate time will be 30-40 minutes (12 minutes per paired group)

Speech Order and Time Allocation (Oxford-Oregon Style)

Note: Prior to this activity, the teacher must have assigned students to search for facts and guidelines of Oxford-Oregon Debate.

Speaker	Team	Role and Function	Time (Typical)
1st Affirmative	Affirmative	Defines the motion, presents arguments supporting the proposition	2 minutes
1st Negative	Negative	Rebuts Affirmative's arguments; presents counter-arguments	2 minutes
2nd Affirmative	Affirmative	Rebuts 1st Negative, reinforces own team's case, adds new arguments	2 minutes
2nd Negative	Negative	Rebuts 2nd Affirmative, adds own new arguments or elaborates the earlier ones	2 minutes
3rd Affirmative	Affirmative	Rebuts all previous Negative points, summarizes and defends their case (no new arguments)—concluding statement	2 minutes
3rd Negative	Negative	Rebuts all previous Affirmative points, summarizes and defends their case (no new arguments)—concluding statement	2 minutes

	Note: The teacher will serve as the debate moderator. A timekeeper assigned must signal when each speaker's time is almost up and when it is up. 7. The debaters will be graded according to this rubric. 8. After the debate, the teacher will give feedback on the learners' debate presentation. Debate Rubric: Social Responsibility, Cultural Diversity/Awareness, and Shared Values (100 points)-it is placed on a separate page. Note to the Teacher: Were the learners able to perform the communicative event-debate? If the answer is yes, it indicates that the learners have truly mastered the lesson. Then, the teacher will let the learners answer the reflection questions as an assignment. • After the debate, the learners will answer these questions as a reflection assignment (write your answers in ½ crosswise paper). Student Reflection Prompts: 1. What aspect of my argument or narrative am I most proud of, and what can I improve? 2. What did I learn about how responsibility, culture, and values shaped or influenced the way we communicate? 3. How can I apply what I learned to promote respect and empathy in my community?
VI. REFLECTION (Feedback and Continuous Improvement)	Teacher Reflection: 1. Were the students able to effectively integrate values into their arguments and narratives? 2. What strategies helped deepen their understanding of social responsibility, cultural diversity, and shared values?

	3. Were the strategies used in eliciting students' understanding and appreciation of the topic effective? Give proof 4. Were the students able to grasp the target of understanding and realizing the importance of the topics? Cite proof 5. How can my future lessons further support and enhance effective communication skills? 6. What difficulties did I encounter in the delivery of the lesson? How did I resolve these concerns?
