LESSON EXEMPLAR

Learning Area	Effective Communication	Grade Level	11
Semester	First	Quarter	2

I. OBJECTIVES (Identifying the Goals)

Content Standard	The learners demonstrate effective communication in social and cultural contexts through oral, written, and multimodal forms; they understand that interaction patterns reflect social roles, group norms and dynamics, and cultural diversity, and that openness, intercultural sensitivity, inclusive language, and ethical considerations foster respectful engagement with diverse communities in public settings and digital spaces.
Performance Standard	Produce spoken, written, and multimodal texts such as public service announcements, opinion pieces, cultural narratives, community blog posts, and reflective commentaries that promote inclusive and ethical social communication.
Learning Competencies	1. Identify main messages, implied meanings, and biases in public, civic, or culturally significant communication events (e.g., social media, podcasts, art exhibitions, festivals). 2. Compose public-facing texts (e.g., blogs, commentaries, social media advocacy posts, or short opinion pieces) that promote inclusivity, equity, or social awareness. 3. Compose critical reviews of culturally significant texts (e.g., films, short stories, poetry, television series). 4. Describe how cultural awareness and sensitivity influence processes of interpretation, engagement, and expression in diverse social contexts.

Analyzing the Tasks)	- Specify biases in public, civic, or culturally significant communication events - Craft public-facing texts (e.g., blogs, commentaries, social media advocacy posts, or short opinion pieces) that promote inclusivity, equity, or social awareness - Create critical reviews of culturally significant texts (e.g., films, short stories, poetry, television series). - Describe how cultural awareness and sensitivity influence processes of interpretation, engagement, and expression in diverse social contexts.
IV. PROCEDURES	ANNOTATION *Based on the learning competency:
A. Activating Prior Knowledge	1. Activating Prior Knowledge Concept Map Think of words that can be associated with the words Sources of Messages Expected answers: 1. Facebook, Tiktok, Youtube, etc (Social Media) 2. Newspaper 3. Radio 4. Television The teacher will ask the following questions: Which of these sources of messages do you frequently use? Why?

Teacher should guide students in exploring different types of messages, including the main message, implied message, and potential sub-messages. These represent unpacked learning experiences. Using a concept map can enhance students' retention, encourage active participation, and support Reflective Learning by fostering self-awareness, deeper understanding, and critical thinking.

This activity is designed to engage learners by activating their prior knowledge through personal reflection and collaborative learning, aligned with the competencies outlined in the IDF Senior High School Curriculum.

Example in sentence:

The school organized a civic awareness program to teach students about their role in the community

- Bias- is a tendency to favor one perspective, group, or opinion over others, often in an unfair or unbalanced way.

Example in sentence:

The law should be applied without bias, ensuring fairness and equality for all.

- Microblogging- is a form of online communication where users post short, frequent updates or messages. These posts can include text, images, links, or videos, and are typically shared on platforms like Twitter, Tumblr, or Threads

2. Establishing the Purpose of the Lesson

In today's lesson, the learners will identify the main messages, implied messages, biases in public, civic, or culturally significant communication events.

Based on the answers given by students, the teacher will emphasize the different sources of messages that can be taken from various sources.

Processing Questions:

1. What is the main message or purpose of the communication event, and how is it conveyed through language, visuals, or tone?
2. What underlying or implied messages can be inferred from the speaker's words, tone, or context, even if they are not directly stated?
3. What potential biases or perspectives are present in the communication, and how might the speaker's background, goals, or audience influence the message?

B. Instituting New Knowledge

Presenting Examples:
Activity: Analyze and Share

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

The teacher will let the learners watch a short video clip. The teacher will ask the following questions:

1. What is the message of the video
2. Share your insights about the video to the class

Link of the video:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jDwjqJLLLC8>

The teacher will now present the lesson, as she showed a video earlier that will serve as an introduction to the topic.

The teacher will present some materials that focus on the Main Messages, Implied Messages, and Biases in public, civic, and communication events. The main message is the central thought or argument that an author wants to communicate in a text. It reflects the primary purpose or focus of the work. In academic writing, it's often supported by evidence and analysis. The main message helps readers understand the core theme of the discussion. It is usually expressed in the thesis statement or topic sentence.

The Power of Daily Reading

Reading every day offers countless benefits that enrich both the mind and the soul. On a cognitive level, it helps expand vocabulary by introducing readers to new words and expressions within various contexts. This naturally leads to improved communication and language skills. Additionally, daily reading enhances concentration, as it requires focus and mental discipline—skills that are increasingly important in today's fast-paced, screen-dominated environment.

Reading also plays a vital role in strengthening comprehension abilities. As individuals engage with more complex texts, they learn to understand deeper meanings, recognize main ideas, and make inferences—all of which are crucial for academic success and critical thinking.

teacher will present the lesson by providing questions and examples to help students fully understand main, implied, and biased messages. Students will then read a passage or text, analyze its content, and demonstrate their understanding by creating their own written piece.

Republic of the Philippines

Department of Education

BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

Beyond the academic and mental benefits, reading is a powerful tool for emotional well-being. It provides a form of escape and relaxation, helping to reduce stress and anxiety. Fictional stories, in particular, allow readers to step into other people's shoes, fostering empathy and offering insight into different cultures, lifestyles, and human experiences.

Even short, consistent sessions—just 15 minutes of reading each day—can contribute significantly to a person's intellectual and emotional development. In a world full of digital distractions and constant noise, maintaining the habit of reading becomes a meaningful and effective way to nurture personal growth and lifelong learning.

Main message:

Daily reading is a powerful habit that enhances vocabulary, focus, comprehension, and emotional well-being, making it essential for personal growth and lifelong learning. (This is the main idea because it captures the overall message, emphasizing the wide range of benefits, both academically and emotionally. It also includes the key points that support all the ideas stated.)

Implied Message

An implied message is a meaning or message that is not directly stated, but is suggested or conveyed through indirect language, actions, or nonverbal cues. It requires the recipient to infer or interpret the message, rather than simply receiving it explicitly.

Manny Pacquiao renews criticism of homosexuality

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

Filipino boxer and politician Manny Pacquiao has repeated his opposition to homosexuality, after earlier apologizing for saying that gay people were “worse than animals”.

“What I am saying is right. I mean I am just stating the truth, what the Bible says,” he said at training in his hometown of General Santos.

The boxer said his only mistake had been to compare people to animals. Nike ended its deal after his initial comments, calling them “abhorrent”. Mr Pacquiao had said during a TV interview that animals were better than gay people “because they can distinguish male from female”. His remarks were condemned across the world – including by gay basketball star Jason Collins and the boxer who defeated him last May, Floyd Mayweather. Mr Pacquiao then apologized on Facebook, external, saying he was sorry for hurting people and was “not condemning LGBT” but was still against gay marriage. But on Thursday, a Bible quote appeared on his Instagram account, reading: “If a man has sexual relations with a man as one does with a woman, both of them have done what is detestable. They are to be put to death; their blood will be on their own heads.” Local Filipino media captured a screenshot of the image before it was deleted and Mr Pacquiao’s staff in General Santos confirmed that the post had been published on the boxer’s account.

However, Mr Pacquiao – still wearing his Nike sports gear – insisted the row had not affected him. “I’m happy. I’m always happy because God is with me,” he said. Mr Pacquiao intends to retire from boxing after his April fight against Timothy Bradley from the US, and will step up his career in politics. The boxer, who has converted from Catholicism to an evangelical Protestant faith, has said he wants to be president. Homosexuality is not a crime in the Philippines, but gay marriage is against the law in the strongly Catholic country.

Implied message:

The passage implies Pacquiao’s beliefs about homosexuality are influenced by his religious convictions, even though these beliefs are not fully laid out

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

or explained in detail. It also implies a tension between his personal views, the criticism he receives, and his ambition to maintain his stance, all of which create an underlying message that is not directly spelled out but can be inferred from his actions, words, and responses.

Biases

Biases refer to the prejudices or inclinations that affect a person's judgment, often in a way that is unfair or unbalanced. These biases can arise from personal experiences, cultural influences, or societal stereotypes, leading to a distorted perception of people, events, or situations. There are two common types: explicit biases, which are conscious, and implicit biases, which are unconscious but can still influence behavior. Biases can affect decision-making in areas such as hiring, law enforcement, and media representation, often resulting in unfair treatment. Being aware of one's own biases is crucial in reducing their impact and promoting fairness and objectivity in interactions and decisions.

Killing drug addicts: Based on poor evidence and flawed reasoning
Raymund E. Narag (Rappler)

Former president Rodrigo Duterte left behind a bloody trail as he waged a violent anti-illegal drug campaign that led to thousands of Filipinos killed in the poorest communities. Government data shows that at least 6,252 people were killed in police operations between July 1, 2016, and May 31, 2022. This excludes victims of vigilante-style killings, which human rights groups estimate to be between 27,000 to 30,000.

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education

Duterte's war on drugs is being investigated by the International Criminal Court for possible crimes against humanity. Many of those left behind, including widows and orphaned children, pin their hopes on the ICC for possible justice.

Rappler revisits families of drug war victims to listen and retell their stories as they seek justice in the face of continuing fear and challenges post-Duterte.

Biased message:

The article reflects bias by focusing mainly on the victims of extrajudicial killings, presenting the situation as unjust and one-sided. It emphasizes the lack of due process and the suffering of the poor, without showing the government's reasons for launching the anti-drug campaign. The emotional angle highlights grief and fear, which influences readers to take a sympathetic view toward the victims. While raising awareness about human rights is important, fair reporting should also include different sides of the story.

Because the article omits the government's defense or legal basis, it shows bias toward condemning the actions taken during Duterte's drug war.

Fake news is dividing Filipinos – PCO chief

The government’s chief communicator on Friday lamented that the nation is being divided by online disinformation, misinformation and fake news.

“What is happening to us right now is we are being polarized, being divided online. Filipinos are being pitted against Filipinos,” Presidential Communications Office (PCO) Secretary Jay Ruiz told the House Tri-Committee’s (Tri-Comm) hearing on malicious and fake online content.

Ruiz said the division that is happening in the country is similar to the discord the world is seeing in the United States(US).

He welcomed the Tri-Comm inquiry into fake news and proposed that the PCO, Department of Justice (DoJ), and Department of Information and Communications Technology (DICT) collaborate closely in combatting the spread of fake news.

He said neutralizing malicious online content “is the big fight” the nation should be waging.

“Lies, repeated a thousand times, becomes the truth. We have to fight lies with truth. The voice of truth should be louder than lies,” he said.

The PCO chief warned of the dangers of division among the population caused by online disinformation and misinformation.

He also called attention to the dangers of deep fakes.

He said the PCO has received complaints from some overseas Filipino workers who were victimized by deepfake-enabled scams using celebrities.

The secretary also called for online content moderation and regulation of social media platforms like Tiktok, Facebook and Youtube.

However, he said the problem is that these platforms are not based in the Philippines.
