LESSON EXEMPLAR

Learning Area	Effective Communication	Grade Level	11
Semester	First	Quarter	1

I. OBJECTIVES (Identifying the Goals)

Content Standard	The learners demonstrate effective communication in personal and interpersonal contexts through spoken, written, and multimodal forms; they understand that interaction patterns are adaptive and collaborative, and that trust-building, emotional reciprocity, and contextual understanding foster meaningful relationships.
Performance Standard	The learners are able to perform specific roles in controlled and uncontrolled personal and interpersonal communication events; engage in intrapersonal communication, including goal-setting, reflection and journaling; participate in extended conversations and discussions on a variety of personal and interpersonal topics; provide short and extended responses to questions pertaining to the content and intent of conversations and correspondences; and produce short and extended personal and interpersonal correspondence in formats such as, but not limited to, letters, email, texting and messaging, and social media posts.
Learning Competencies	1. Determine how language and tone are used purposefully in discussing a variety of personal and interpersonal topics. 2. Use language, tone, and structure appropriately for audience, purpose, and context in discussing a variety of personal and interpersonal topics. 3. Review one's participation in personal and interpersonal communication, identifying strengths and areas for growth to improve communicative competence and personal effectiveness.

(Sequencing Content)
IV. OBJECTIVES (Setting Clear Objectives and Analyzing the Tasks)	At the end of the session, learners are expected to: - identify and describe the different types of language and tone used in personal and interpersonal communication; - explain the importance of choosing appropriate words and tone when interacting with others, using examples from real-life or simulated conversations; and - compare how language and tone vary depending on the relationship between the speaker and the listener, through role-play or written examples.
IV. PROCEDURES This section focuses on selecting learner-centered, evidence-based instructional approaches such as problem-based learning, collaborative tasks, interdisciplinary integration, and technology-enhanced instruction. These strategies are intended to foster active engagement, critical thinking, and adaptability across diverse learning pathways. The chosen approaches and methodologies will be reflected through varied and relevant activities and assessments that emphasize real-world relevance and application, thereby enhancing learner engagement and comprehension.	ANNOTATION

A. Activating Prior Knowledge	1. Activating Prior Knowledge Option 1: Title: "How Do You Say Hello?" Teacher's Instructions: 1. Show four images on screen or printed based on the descriptions listed below: Visual Prompt (Slide or poster): - A student introducing themselves to a new classmate - A person introducing themselves to a job interviewer - A gamer introducing themselves in an online chat - A person introducing themselves to a politician 2. Ask students: "If you were the person in this situation, how would you say hello?" 3. In pair work, students share their answers with their seatmates. Have them discuss the exact words they would use, and how their tone or body language might change. 4. After 3-5 minutes, ask for volunteers to act out their version of each greeting. Processing Questions: - How did your tone or choice of words change between situations? - Why did you choose to speak that way to a job interviewer vs. a classmate? - What would happen if you used the wrong tone in one of these situations?	The activity activates prior knowledge by encouraging students to reflect on how greetings change across contexts. The activity is inclusive, as it incorporates diverse social scenarios, inviting students to share personal and professional greeting styles.

	Option 2: Activity 2: Tone Swap Teacher's Instructions: 1. Prepare 3–5 simple sample lines on the board or slide. Examples: a. "Nice to meet you." b. "How are you?" c. "I didn't expect that." d. "Thanks a lot." 2. Students work in pairs. Students choose one line and they will act it out in two different ways, using different tones or situations. For example, say 'Nice to meet you' as if you're meeting your best friend... then say it again to someone you don't like." 3. After 2-3 minutes, have volunteers present both versions. After each pair. Processing Questions: 1. Did the meaning change even though the words stayed the same? 2. How did body language and facial expression help show the tone? 3. Why is this important in skit performances or real-life conversations? 2. Establishing the Purpose of the Lesson This part the learners will know the learning goals, relevance, and real-life applications of the lesson. It sets expectations and provides motivation by answering the question: "Why are we learning this?"	This activity helps students see how the way we say something can completely change its meaning. By practicing the same sentence in different tones or moods, they learn that communication is not just about words, but also about how we use our voice, face, and body. It builds confidence, encourages creativity, and shows how important expression is in both real-life conversations and performances. Working in pairs makes it easier and more enjoyable to learn together.

In this part of the lesson, students are introduced to what they will learn, why it matters, and how it applies to real life.

Teacher's Instructions:

1. Ask the students this question: Do you speak the same way to your friend and to your teacher? Why or why not?
2. Tell students that today's lesson will explore how simple phrases (like "hello") can be said differently depending on who we are speaking to and the situation.
3. Emphasize that the goal is to help them use tone and language purposefully, especially when performing skits or engaging in real-life conversations.

This activity sets the stage for the lesson by connecting students' everyday communication habits to the broader concept of tone and audience awareness. It encourages reflection and curiosity while clearly framing the lesson's relevance to both performance and real-world social interactions.

B. Instituting New Knowledge	1. Presenting Examples This step involves showing a relatable, concrete, or real-life example that illustrates the new concept. Examples can be visual, situational, or experiential and are used to spark interest and provide context. Activity Option 1: Intro Switch Teacher's Instructions: 1. The teacher shows a video or video clips based on the following descriptions: - One casual introduction during a job interview (e.g., “Hey, wazz up?”). - One formal introduction during a casual hangout (e.g., “Good afternoon, I am Jane Cruz, it is my pleasure to meet you.) - A natural and balanced introduction for each setting Suggested video found in Youtube: The video showcases various ways to introduce oneself in different settings. The teacher may pause or skip scenes that are not relevant to the activity https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=C0eu8OQ-cfQ Processing Questions: - What do you notice about the way they spoke in each video? - Was the language they used appropriate for the situation? Why or why not?	This activity uses real-life scenarios to make the lesson more relevant. The video helps students understand how language and tone change in different contexts, providing relevant instruction that connects theory to real-world situations.

Option 2: Interview Do's and Don'ts: Spot the Difference
Youtube link: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EAqAgM_tfmU

Teacher's Instructions:

1. The teacher plays a two-minute video featuring an interview between two people. Students observe the interviewees' greeting styles (formal vs. casual), tone of voice, body language, and word choices in both examples

Processing Questions:

1. What did you notice about how they spoke in each part of the video?
2. Do you think the language used was appropriate for the situation? Why or why not?
3. Based on the way they introduced themselves, who do you think would be hired? Why?

Discussing New Concept

This is the explicit teaching or guided exploration of the lesson's key ideas. It includes defining terms, explaining relationships, using models or analogies, and encouraging learner interaction.

Option The teacher prepares short descriptions of the following subtopic1: Jigsaw Strategy

Teacher's Instructions:

Handouts for students:

- a. Personal Language

The Jigsaw Strategy and Gallery Walk are differentiated instruction activities designed to actively engage all students in class discussions. These strategies promote responsive instruction by connecting learning to students' real-world experiences. In this approach, the teacher acts as a facilitator, reducing direct instruction and encouraging a student-centered learning environment.

Description:

Personal language is used to express one's own thoughts, feelings, and experiences. It often includes first-person pronouns like I or my and focuses on the speaker's inner world. This type of language is reflective and subjective. It's common in journals, autobiographies, and personal speeches.

Example: "I was really proud of myself after finishing the project."

Situation: Writing a personal essay or telling a story about your life.

B. Interpersonal Language

Handouts for students:

Description:

Interpersonal language is used for social interaction and communication with others. It involves greetings, polite expressions, questions, and responses that help build relationships or complete tasks together. It can be formal or informal, depending on the context. This language supports connection and cooperation.

Example: "Could you help me understand this part of the lesson?"

Situation: Working with a group or speaking in a meeting.

C. Tone: Describes how tone conveys emotion or attitude in communication.

Handouts for students:

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

Tone of Language refers to the emotional quality or attitude conveyed in communication. It can affect how a message is interpreted, based on word choice, pitch, and context.
Tone can be formal or informal, friendly or serious, aggressive or polite, etc. The tone depends on the relationship between the speaker and the audience, the setting, and the purpose of communication.

Examples:

Formal Tone:

Example: "I would like to express my gratitude for your assistance."

Situation: Used in professional settings or official correspondence.

Informal Tone:

Example: "Hey, thanks for helping me out!"

Situation: Used in casual conversations with friends or family.

Friendly Tone:

Example: "I'm so happy to see you! How've you been?"

Situation: Used in relaxed settings, showing warmth and affection.

Serious Tone:

Example: "This is a critical issue that requires immediate attention."

Situation: Used in professional or urgent contexts

D. Personal Context: Describes the informal language, commonly used in close and casual relationships.

Handouts for students:

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

Personal context involves communication centered on an individual's thoughts, emotions, experiences, or opinions. It typically uses informal, subjective language and is common in self-reflection or close relationships.

Example:

"I'm excited to start my new job next week."

Situation:

Used when sharing personal updates or feelings with a friend or family member.

E. Interpersonal Context: Describes more formal communication used in professional or intimate settings.

- Interpersonal context refers to communication used in formal or personal settings, like the workplace or close relationships.
- It is more structured than casual language and typically reflects respect or politeness.
- This type of communication helps maintain and strengthen relationships by balancing clear information with emotional sensitivity.

Example:

- A student asking a professor for an extension on a project might say:
"Good afternoon, Professor. I hope you are doing well. I wanted to ask if it's possible to get an extension on the

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

project deadline. I understand if not, but I would appreciate your consideration.”

2. For groupings, divide the class into five groups based on the five topics listed above. Refer to Teacher’s Instruction No. 1, where you can find the handouts for each topic.

3. Once the groups are formed, instruct students to select a number from 1 to 5. If there are more than 5 students in a group, some students can be assigned to any number between 1 and 5.

4. These numbered students now become the “expert group” for their assigned topic (e.g., all students with the number 1 become experts on personal language, those with number 2 on interpersonal language, etc.).

Expert Group Activity:

6. After grouping them by their assigned number, give each expert group a copy of handouts with descriptions and details of their assigned topic.

7. Set a time limit for the expert groups to discuss the topic and make sure everyone understands..

Re-grouping and Sharing:

8. Once the expert groups are ready, have students return to their original groups. Each member of the original group should now be an expert on a different topic (one will explain personal language, tone, etc.).

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education

9. In their new groups, students take turns explaining the topic of their assigned topic to the others.

10. During the discussion, the teacher should facilitate and monitor students' participation and provide clarifications if needed

Quiz and Verification:

11. After the group discussions, the teacher may give a short quiz to check the key concepts.

12. The teacher prepares 3-5 questions about the topics and show or read them on the slide/board.

13. Ask each group to answer one question. For verification of the answers, the teacher calls upon a "verifier" from another group to confirm whether the answer is correct or not.

Option 2: Gallery Walk

Teacher's Instructions:

1. The teacher prepares the topic handouts. For the topics, refer to Option 1: Jigsaw Strategy, where you can find the handouts for each topic. These can be written on paper or printed and posted in the corners of the classroom.
2. The class is divided into 5 groups. The teacher can use a fun or creative way to group them. Each station will focus on one

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

	topic and will include a specific question for the group to answer, making sure each team has a unique challenge. - Once groups are ready, the class starts the gallery walk — going around the room, visiting each learning station, reading the subtopic, and discussing as a team. - After the given time, everyone returns to their seats, stays in their groups, and the teacher leads a short discussion to check understanding and share insights. 3. Developing Mastery In this part learners will engage in guided and independent practice activities to reinforce the concept. This may include drills, problem-solving, application tasks, or peer collaboration. This is the explicit teaching or guided exploration of the lesson's key ideas. It includes defining terms, explaining relationships, using models or analogies, and encouraging learner interaction.*this pertains to formative assessment Activity: Option 1: One Thought, Three Ways Teacher's Instructions: - Provide students with a “spark line” or emotional prompt (e.g., feeling afraid, offering thanks or congratulations, expressing disagreement, etc.). - Assign the activity to pairs or small groups. - Ask students to write three versions of the same message based on the given spark line:	The activities — Option 1: One Thought, Three Ways and Option 2: Venn Reflection — show that students are mastering how to adjust their tone and language depending on who they're talking to. These tasks follow the Instructional Delivery Framework (IDF) by being interactive (working in groups), responsive (changing how messages are written for different people), and reflective (thinking about why those changes matter). Whether through writing or using a Venn diagram, students clearly practice how to communicate better in real-life situations.

6. Suggested Spark Lines:

(You may add more as needed.)

- a. I disagree with a classmate's opinion.
- b. I forgot to do my assignment.
- c. I feel proud of something I accomplished.
- d. I would like to thank my classmates for their inspiration.

Option 2: Activity: one Tracker: Exploring Message Variation

Teacher's Instructions:

1. Provide students with a sparkline (an emotional or situational prompt. Refer to Option 1 activity.
2. In pairs or small groups, students write three versions of a message in response to the prompt:
 - a. Personal: journal entry or message to a close friend
 - b. Interpersonal: message to a classmate or teacher
 - c. Public/Semi-formal: social media post, speech, or email
3. After writing, students use a three-circle Venn diagram to compare:
 - a. Unique words or phrases for each tone
 - b. Tone indicators (formality, punctuation, emojis, etc.)
 - c. Shared ideas across all three contexts
4. After writing, students will answer these questions in 1–3 sentences each:
 - a. How did the tone change across the three versions?
 - b. Which words or phrases did you adjust? Why?
 - c. Which version was the easiest to write? Which was the most challenging? Why?

C. Demonstrating Knowledge and Skills	Finding Practical Application In this stage learners apply what they have learned to real-life or simulated scenarios, problems, or tasks. This involves transferring knowledge and skills to authentic contexts and this will serve as scaffolding for the unit performance task. Option 1: Activity: On Hot Seat Teacher's Instructions: 1. The teacher arranges the students in a circle. A small object, like a ball or something that can be passed around, is prepared, or a volunteer starts passing the 'hot potato.' 2. The game begins with one student holding the "hot potato." 3. This student introduces themselves using a specific format (e.g., "Hi, my name is (name), and one interesting fact about me is (fact)." 4. After their introduction, they pass the hot potato to another student who must introduce themselves in a similar way. 5. Keep it short— each introduction should take no longer than 15 seconds. Variation with Participation:	The "Hot Potato" activity is integrative because it helps students connect their communication skills to real-life scenarios, leading them toward the learning assessment unit. It combines elements of speaking, listening, and adaptability, encouraging students to apply what they've learned in a practical, interactive way that prepares them for the upcoming assessment.

Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

6. Active Involvement: While a student is introducing themselves, everyone else must listen and remember one key detail about the student's introduction. Once the introduction is complete, the listeners share one thing they remember about the student's introduction (this fosters active listening and empathy).
7. As the activity progresses, this guides students to vary the tone, language, and body language of their introductions based on different contexts. This prepares them for the skit performance, where they will act out realistic communication scenarios.
8. Continue passing the "hot potato" around the group. Every student must introduce themselves, but in a way that is connected to the previous student's introduction.
9. Keep the energy up by making sure the introductions are fast-paced and lively.

Option 2: Activity: Coin connection

Teacher's Instructions:

1. The class sits in a circle. The teacher chooses one student to start.
2. The next student introduces themselves but must connect their fact to the previous person's fact.
3. Make sure there is no repetition of facts and the introduction should be at least 15 seconds. To make it livelier and funnier, the teacher may instruct to change themes.
4. Suggested Themes:

This activity supports responsive and reflective instruction by encouraging students to share personal facts and connect with each other's stories. It promotes active listening, self-expression, and real-life connections. The teacher simply guides the process, while students take the lead, making learning more meaningful, engaging, and centered on their experiences.

(The teacher may add more as needed.)

- a. Family Gathering
Tone: Casual, emotional, sometimes dramatic Example: “Introduce yourself as a cousin meeting long-lost relatives at a reunion.”
- b. Emergency Meeting
Tone: Urgent, serious
Example: “You’re part of a team solving a crisis and must introduce your role quickly and clearly.”
- c. Courtroom Scene
Tone: Formal, defensive
Example: “Introduce yourself as a witness, lawyer, or suspect in a trial.”
- d. TV Talk Show
Tone: Energetic, entertaining
Example: “You’re a guest introducing yourself to a live audience and host.”
- e. High School Reunion
Tone: Nostalgic, humorous
Example: “You’re reconnecting with classmates after 20 years and must reintroduce yourself.”

2. Making Generalization

This phase the learners will draw conclusions or summarize the key takeaways from the lesson. It can be done through discussions, reflective questions, or concept mapping

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

Option 1: Activity: Cabbage Ball

Teacher's Instructions:

1. The teacher prepares 4–5 questions, which may include content, takeaways, and understanding of the topic, and also prepares a song to play during the activity
2. Each question is written on a sheet of bond paper, and the five sheets are rolled into a cabbage-like ball.
3. The teacher passes the cabbage ball around while music plays.
4. When the music stops, the student holding the cabbage ball unrolls it like a cabbage and reads the question.
5. The process continues until all questions are answered. The teacher can add a twist—for example, the student who answers the question might be the third girl to their left.

Option 2: Activity: Mystery Reveal

Teacher's Instructions:

1. The teacher prepares 4–5 envelopes.
2. Inside each envelope is a graphic organizer labeled with a main topic or question (for example: Key Takeaways, Important Keywords, What I Learned About Tone, Personal vs. Interpersonal Language, etc.).

The "Cabbage Ball" activity promotes generalization by encouraging students to apply and reflect on what they've learned in a dynamic and engaging way. It fosters critical thinking as students quickly recall, analyze, and explain content when the music stops. The activity caters to diverse learners by incorporating movement and music, catering to different learning styles. Teachers can modify questions or add twists to meet students' needs, making it a flexible and responsive instructional method that keeps all students engaged and challenged.

This activity supports the IDF by fostering reflective and collaborative learning. As students work together to complete the mystery graphic organizer, they actively recall key concepts and apply what they've learned,

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education

3. Each envelope has blank spaces to be filled in by students.
4. Students stay seated in their groups.
5. The teacher randomly distributes each group one envelope.
6. Groups open the envelope, pull out the organizer, and work together to fill in the blanks with keywords, important points, or answers based on what they learned.

Optional Activity:

ACT Reflection Questions.

Students take 5–10 minutes to fill in the blanks, thinking about the tone and language they use in their skit.

The teacher facilitates a short discussion, asking students to share their thoughts on how they change their communication and why it's important.

A.C.T. Reflection Questions:

- a. Actual Tone – In the personal communication scene, I used a _____ tone, and in the formal communication scene, I used a _____ tone.
- b. Contextual Shifts – I changed my communication by _____ when moving from the personal to the formal context.
- c. Transformative Thinking – It is important to adjust tone and language because ____ encouraging deeper thinking and meaningful reflection. The random envelope distribution adds excitement and promotes responsive instruction, as the teacher can adjust topics based on class needs. It shifts the focus from teacher-led review to student-driven discovery, making the learning process more engaging and student-centered.

3. Evaluating Learning

In this step the learners are assessed to determine the level of their understanding and skill acquisition. This may include written activities, performance tasks, or other check-in activities. This must be aligned to unit summative assessment.

Option 1: Activity: Check in or out

Teacher's Instructions:

The teacher shows a checklist or provides a copy, and the students check whether they have achieved the strategies based on the categories.

Student's instructions:

Check (/) the box in the category that best evaluates your ability to use them.

	Category
Strategy	Very Well	Fairly Well	Not Very well
I can greet and respond to a greeting
I can use a conversation starter other than a greeting

In Option 1 activity, using a checklist helps students reflect on what they've learned by allowing them to track their progress and readiness for assessment. In Option 2, the emoji variation adds a fun twist—students use emojis to show how confident or prepared they feel about certain topics. Both approaches support reflective instruction by promoting self-assessment and awareness, helping learners recognize their strengths and areas to improve in a way that's engaging and meaningful.

	I can vary language tones to express my feelings.
	I can keep the conversation going.
	I can pre-close the conversation.
	I can end the conversation.
	Option 2: Emoji Emote Teacher's Instructions: Using the same checklist from Option 1, the categories—Very Well, Fairly Well, and Not Very Well—will be replaced with emojis: 😊 Confident = Very Well 😐 Almost There = Fairly Well 😞 Needs Practice = Not Very Well Option 3: Quiz. Multiple Choice questions 1. Which scenario best manifests the use of personal language in communication, and how does it differ from interpersonal language?
	This additional activity is intended for when the teacher identifies that students need more enrichment activities. The movie script analysis, where students compare the differences between personal and interpersonal communication, will give them a better overview of how to perform a skit using the examples provided

V. ASSESSMENT (Assessing Learnings)	Activity: Skit Performance Duration: 10 minutes Format: Mixed (Offline and Online) Scenario Overview: The school is hosting a forum (both offline in the auditorium and online via Zoom) to decide if students should be required to wear uniforms. Participants include student representatives, teachers, SSG officers and parents. Teacher's instructions: 1.Explain the forum setup (hybrid: both online and offline). 2.Assign each group (5–8 members) one role per member. Adjust roles as needed.

3. Emphasize that this is a skit performance where each role will present their stance for about 20–30 seconds.
4. Let students prepare opening statements and responses for a short Q&A.
5. Roles per Group (choose 5–8 participants)
6. Each group member plays one of the following:
 - a. Student Rep (Pro-Uniform) Supports uniforms for equality and discipline
 - b. Student Rep (Anti-Uniform) Against uniforms; supports self-expression
 - c. Teacher (Supports) Believes uniforms create a disciplined environment
 - d. Teacher (Opposes) Sees uniforms as restrictive and costly
 - e. School Gov Rep (Supports) Supports unity and image via uniforms
 - f. School Gov Rep (Opposes) Advocates for student freedom and practicality
 - g. Parent Rep (Offline) Presents parent views (cost, comfort, individuality)
 - h. Moderator Keeps time, manages order, summarizes the discussion
7. Forum Flow (10 Minutes Total)
 - Opening Statements – Each speaker talks for 20–30 seconds.
 - Q&A – Audience asks short questions (live or via chat).
 - Discussion – Participants react/respond to opposing ideas.
 - Conclusion – Moderator summarizes; audience votes.

Rubrics for skit performance:

Indicators	5	4	3
Role Understanding & Delivery	Clearly and confidently portrayed assigned role with consistent perspective; showed deep understanding of role's stance.	Role was mostly clear and stance was understood; minor inconsistency.	Role was somewhat clear but with noticeable confusion or weak stance.
Opening Statement	Delivered a well-structured, persuasive 20–30 second	Statement was clear and within time but lacked strong persuasiveness.	Went over/under time or message was unclear.

		statement; clear purpose and tone.
	Interaction & Q&A Response	Responded appropriately to questions and opposing views with relevant and respectful answers.	Gave relevant responses; some hesitation or repetition.	Gave limited or unclear responses; lacked engagement.
	Use of Language & Tone	Used appropriate formal/informal tone; language suited to role and forum context.	Tone and language were generally appropriate with few lapses.	Tone or word choice occasionally mismatched the role/context.
	Team Coordination	Seamless transitions, well-timed entries; strong group collaboration online/offline.	Group worked well together with minor coordination issues.	Some evident miscommunication or overlap between roles.
	Moderator (if applicable)	Kept timing well, managed flow, and gave a clear summary at the end.	Moderated effectively with minor lapses in flow or summary.	Attempted to manage but had timing issues or unclear summary.
	Creativity & Engagement	Highly engaging performance with creative interpretation or local references.	Engaging performance; some effort in creativity or personalization.	Limited engagement; little creative effort.
VI. REFLECTION (Feedback and Continuous Improvement)	Reflection questions: 1. How many students achieved 80% on the assessment? How many learners need remediation? 2. Which of my teaching strategies worked well? 3. What difficulties did I encounter in the delivery of the lesson? How did I resolve these concerns?
