III. CONTENT (Sequencing Content)	Career Advancement 1. Training 2. Coaching and Mentoring 3. Promotion
IV. OBJECTIVES (Setting Clear Objectives and Analyzing the Tasks)	At the end of the lesson, the learners are expected to: • analyze the role of training, coaching, mentoring, and promotion in career advancement. • value the importance of lifelong learning and guidance in professional growth. • demonstrate strategies for career advancement through collaborative and reflective activities.
IV. PROCEDURES		ANNOTATION
A. Activating Prior Knowledge	1. Activating Prior Knowledge OPTION 1 Career Ladder Think-Pair-Share In this activity, learners draw a “career ladder” which include stick figure climbing steps. Each step represents what a person needs to advance in his/her chosen career. INSTRUCTIONS:	This activity serves as a cognitive bridge, connecting the learners' existing vocabulary and life experiences to the new concepts. It is an engaging and collaborative start that builds on prior knowledge.

	1. Ask learners to imagine that a career is like climbing a ladder. Each step represents progress or growth in one's career. 2. Distribute bond papers or ask them to draw in their notebooks a simple ladder with 5–6 steps. 3. Instruct learners to label each step with what they think a person needs to do to advance in their career (e.g., finishing school, training, learning new skills, gaining experience, finding a mentor, getting promoted). 4. After drawing, they will share their ladders with a partner (Think-Pair) and then share insights with the class (Share). Processing Questions: 1. What steps did you write that help someone move up in their career? 2. Which of these do you think is most important? Why? OPTION 2 Career Path Jumble The teacher will present scrambled letters on the board. Learners, in pairs, will unscramble the words and briefly define them based on their initial understanding.

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Write the following scrambled terms on the board or project them:

T N A I N R I G

C H A C I N O G

N O I T O M O R P

T O M E R N I G N

2. Instruct learners to form pairs. Their primary task is to quickly unscramble the four terms (Training, Coaching, Promotion, Mentoring).
3. Once the words are unscrambled, ask pairs to write down a one-sentence definition of each term based purely on their existing knowledge or assumption. They should also quickly brainstorm how one of these terms relates to their current SHS track.
4. Conduct a brief open discussion using the guiding questions:
 - a. What do these words mean to you?
 - b. How are they related to your future career?
 - c. Have you seen these in real life, maybe with your parents or guardians?

	2.Establishing the Purpose of the Lesson OPTION 1 Think Ahead The teacher will present the lesson's objectives and performance task. The teacher will ask, "By the end of this lesson, you will not only understand how people get ahead in their careers, but you will also create a plan for yourself. Why do you think it is important to have a plan for your future career?" OPTION 2 Quick Survey Poll Learners vote on which they think is most important: skills training, mentoring, or promotion.	This part sets clear expectations and provides a strong sense of purpose. By linking the objectives to a personal, real-world task (creating a plan), it motivates learners and answers the "why" behind the lesson.
B. Instituting New Knowledge	1. Presenting Examples OPTION 1 Case to Case In this activity, learners analyze real workplace scenarios to identify how training, coaching/mentoring, and promotion affect career advancement and recommend practical employer/employee actions. INSTRUCTIONS: 1. Remind learners of the lesson purpose: to explore how training, coaching & mentoring, and promotion support career growth.	The use of a relatable, real-life example provides context and sparks interest. This is a concrete illustration that makes the abstract concepts of career advancement more tangible for the learners.

2. Reconnect to the earlier Career Ladder activity and say:
“Today we’ll examine short stories showing how people move up the ladder or get stuck in the ladder.”
 3. Learners read the assigned case study silently and underline key facts. They must underline one sentence that shows the main problem and one sentence that shows the result.
 4. Each group will discuss among themselves the answers to the following questions:
 - ☐ What responsibility was missing or handled well?
 - ☐ Which step on the career ladder does this example relate to?
 - ☐ What specific action(s) would you recommend?
 5. Representatives from each group will also discuss the salient points of their discussion in the class.
- Sample Cases
- Case A — Training
- Carla, an IT staff, completed an online certification in network security. She applied new practices that reduced system downtime. Her manager noticed and gave her more complex tasks and a lead role in a small project.

	Case B — Coaching & Mentoring Juan was paired with a senior engineer who reviewed his designs, gave feedback, and provided checklists for complex tasks. Juan's error rate dropped and he completed projects faster. Case C — Promotion Liza worked 3 years as a cashier. She took initiative to train new hires, volunteered for overtime, and led on-floor problem solving. Management promoted her to shift supervisor. OPTION 2 From REELS to REAL The teacher will show a short video or read a brief case study about a successful professional who advanced in their career. The example should highlight how the individual used training, a mentor, or a specific promotion to achieve their goals. For example, a story of an employee who started as a trainee and worked their way up to a manager. 2. Discussing New Concept OPTION 1 Think-Pair-Share	This activity involves explicit teaching and guided exploration. The "Think-Pair-Share" strategy encourages peer interaction and deepens understanding.

	The teacher will facilitate a discussion on the three main sub-topics: • Training: What are the different types of training? (e.g., formal workshops, on-the-job training, online courses). • Coaching and Mentoring: What is the difference between a coach and a mentor? Why are they important? • Promotion: What are the criteria for promotion? How can one prepare for it? After the discussion, learners will work in pairs to discuss their personal insights and then share with the class. OPTION 2 Concept Mapping ☐ Guided discussion on the definitions and differences among training, coaching/mentoring, and promotion. ☐ Teacher provides a concept map highlighting connections. 3. Developing Mastery OPTION 1: Scenario Role-Play The teacher will present three different scenarios on the board, each representing one sub-topic (training, coaching, promotion).	This is a hands-on, problem-solving activity that reinforces the concepts through application. It serves as a formative assessment, allowing the teacher to gauge understanding and provide immediate feedback.

	• Scenario 1 (Training): A new IT graduate needs to learn a new programming language for a project. • Scenario 2 (Coaching/Mentoring): A learner leader struggles with public speaking and seeks advice. • Scenario 3 (Promotion): An employee wants to apply for a promotion to a supervisory role. In groups of four, learners will choose one scenario and role-play a solution, demonstrating their understanding of the concepts. The teacher will provide feedback and use this as a formative assessment. OPTION 2: Sorting Activity Learners classify given scenarios into training, mentoring/coaching, or promotion.
C. Demonstrating Knowledge and Skills	1. Finding Practical Application OPTION 1: Career Interview Simulation Learners will work in pairs, with one acting as an interviewer and the other as a job candidate. The "candidate" must answer questions about their career aspirations and how they plan to use training, mentoring, and promotion to achieve their goals. The "interviewer" will provide constructive feedback.	This stage involves transferring knowledge to an authentic context. This activity acts as a scaffold for the final performance task by simulating a real-world situation.

OPTION 2: CAREER CONNECTION REFLECTION

2. Making Generalization

OPTION 1: Career Map

The teacher will ask learners to create a simple "Career Map" on a sheet of paper. They will draw their current position (as a learner) and then map out their desired career path, including specific points where they might need to seek training, find a mentor, and aim for a promotion. The teacher will then facilitate a discussion on the importance of having a strategic plan for career advancement.

3. Evaluating Learning

OPTION 1 My Career Advancement Plan

Learners will individually complete a worksheet that prompts them to:

- Identify their dream career.
- List the skills and knowledge required for that career.
- Outline a training plan (what courses or skills to learn).
- Identify a potential mentor (person or professional field).
- Enumerate the promotions or milestones they need to reach.

This worksheet will be collected and assessed based on the clarity and feasibility of the plan.

This reflective activity helps learners synthesize the key takeaways and draw personal conclusions. It reinforces the main concepts of the lesson.
