Lesson No.:	1	Date:
Lesson Title/ Topic:	Language and tones, personal and interpersonal context
Name:		Grade & Section:

- I. Activity No. 1: Title: One Thought, Three Ways
- II. Objective: At the end of the activity, you should be able to write three versions of the same message for different contexts, showing how tone and language change based on the audience.
- III. Materials Needed: pen and paper
- IV. Instructions:

Activity: One Thought, Three Ways

- You will be given a "spark line" (an emotional prompt) that will guide your writing. Your task is to choose one spark line and then write three different versions of the same message based on three different contexts.
- Select one of the following emotional prompts (spark lines):
 - Feeling excited about an upcoming event
 - Feeling frustrated about a recent situation
 - Feeling grateful for someone's help
 - Feeling nervous about a new challenge
 - Feeling proud of a recent achievement
- After choosing your spark line, write three different versions of the same message. Use the following contexts:
 - Personal context: Write as if you're sharing this thought with a close friend or in a personal journal.

- Interpersonal context: Write as if you're talking to a classmate, teacher, or someone in a professional setting.nb cfd

- Public or semi-formal context: Write as if you're posting on social media or preparing a speech for a class presentation.

- Synthesis questions:

After writing your versions, answer the following reflection questions:

- How did the tone change across the three versions?

- Which words or phrases did you adjust, and why?

- Which version was the easiest to write? Which was the most challenging, and why?

II. Objective: At the end of the activity, you should be able to evaluate your conversational skills across various and self-assess your proficiency level.

III. Materials Needed: pen and paper

IV. Instructions

- Look over each category on the checklist.
- When you find the one that fits your skills, just check (/) the box. Be honest with yourself and take your time!

	Category
Strategy	Very Well	Fairly Well	Not Very well
1. I can greet and respond to a greeting.
2. I can use a conversation starter other than a greeting (ex. a question, a compliment, and so on)
3. I can choose appropriate conversation topics
4. I can vary language tones to express my feelings.
5. I can keep the conversation going.
6. I can pre-close the conversation.
7. I can end the conversation.

Synthesis question:

How do the skills you rated in this checklist work together to create a smooth and effective conversation, and how can improving one area help strengthen the others?

I. Activity No. 3: Skit Performance

II. Objective: At the end of the activity, you should be able to analyze and present your arguments about school uniforms in a skit, using clear communication and engaging with different viewpoints, while practicing formal and informal language in both online and offline settings.

III. Materials Needed: Internet and Device (for online participants), Microphone and Speakers (for clear communication), Script or Notes (for preparing statements), (for managing time), Projector/Screen (for offline participants), Markers and Whiteboard/Flip Chart (for summarizing), Costumes/Props (optional for roles), Paper and Pen (for notes and questions), Voting Tools (for audience vote)

IV. Instructions:

Student Instructions: Skit Performance Activity

Duration: 10 minutes

Format: Mixed (Offline and Online)

Scenario Overview:

The school is hosting a forum to decide if students should be required to wear uniforms. This forum will take place both offline (in the auditorium) and online (via Zoom), and participants will include student representatives, teachers, SSG officers, and parents.

Activity Steps:

- Each group (5–8 members) will be assigned a role. Choose roles from the list below, with each member playing one role.
Make sure to understand your position and be ready to present your viewpoint clearly and confidently.
Roles:
 - Student Rep (Pro-Uniform): Supports uniforms for equality and discipline.
 - Student Rep (Anti-Uniform): Against uniforms; supports self-expression.
 - Teacher (Supports): Believes uniforms create a disciplined environment.
 - Teacher (Opposes): Sees uniforms as restrictive and costly.
 - School Gov Rep (Supports): Supports unity and image via uniforms.
 - School Gov Rep (Opposes): Advocates for student freedom and practicality.
 - Parent Rep (Offline): Presents parent views (cost, comfort, individuality).
 - Moderator: Keeps time, manages order, summarizes the discussion.
- Each member must prepare a short opening statement (20–30 seconds) that clearly presents their stance on the issue. Practice your statement to make sure it is clear and convincing.
- After the opening statements, there will be a brief Q&A session where the audience can ask questions (live or via chat). Be ready to respond to questions from the audience, defending your viewpoint.
- During the discussion, interact with other participants. Respond to opposing viewpoints and share your thoughts in a respectful and professional manner.
- The moderator will summarize the discussion, and the audience will vote on the issue based on the arguments presented.

Key Reminders:

- Stay in character throughout the performance.
- Speak clearly and confidently during your turn.
- Respect other participants' views during the discussion.
- Keep your responses focused and relevant to the issue.

Good luck, and enjoy the activity!
