Building Healthy Relationships: Balancing Well-Being and Conflict Resolution

IV. OBJECTIVES

(Setting Clear Objectives and Analyzing the Tasks)

At the end of the session, learners should be able to:

- a. recognize the impact of mental well-being on conflict and collaboration;
- b. determine conflict resolution styles, negotiation, and mediation strategies; and

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

c. create plans on how to manage conflict through negotiation and mediation.

IV. PROCEDURES	ANNOTATION
A. Activating Prior Knowledge 1. Activating Prior Knowledge Good morning! Today before we start, think about a time you had a disagreement with a friend or group. How did you feel, and how did you handle it? Today, we'll explore how our well-being affects how we manage conflicts and learn strategies to build healthy relationships. Let's begin our activity by (state the teacher's chosen activity). OPTION 1 "Healthy Relationships" Grounding Movement (5–7 minutes) Instructions: 1. Begin with a simple mindful breathing exercise while standing or sitting. 2. Transition into gentle stretches (neck rolls, shoulder circles, reaching up, and grounding down). 3. Lead students in a slow mindful walk around the classroom, encouraging them to notice: ○ Their breath ○ Their steps ○ How they feel in their bodies ○ Their awareness of others in the room	Note: The objective of this activity is to help students cultivate awareness of how they connect with others and develop the values of empathy, respect, and presence in their relationships

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
 BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

	Script (optional): “As you walk slowly and mindfully, notice those around you. Can you stay aware of your own experience while being respectful and present with others?” Guiding Question: 1. What did you notice about your body or breath while moving slowly and mindfully? 2. How did it feel to move with awareness while being around others? OPTION 2 “SOLVE THIS CONFLICT” • The teacher will show a picture related to conflict (e.g., two people in disagreement, a group working together, or a peaceful resolution). • Students will be asked to look at the image and write down their responses to the following questions: a. What is happening in the image? b. How do the people in the picture seem to feel? c. What do you think could help resolve the situation? • After 3-5 minutes, the teacher will invite students to share their thoughts with the class. Sample photos:	Note: This activity encourages students to reflect on conflict resolution and emotional well-being through visual analysis, connecting these ideas to the theme of healthy relationships. You can get photos available on the internet for this activity Note: Both activities are designed to get students thinking about their past experiences and how well-being influences conflict resolution.

OPTION 3: A Disagreement Solved

Think of a time when you had a disagreement with a friend. Try to remember this as vividly as possible. Answer these questions:

1. Why did you have a disagreement?
2. What were the problems?
3. What did you feel during the conflict?
How did your friend feel during the conflict?
4. How did you solve the problem?
5. What did you feel when the problem was solved?

Processing Question:

1. What emotions do you think are influencing the people involved in the conflict?
2. What steps could the people in the scenario (or image) take to improve the situation?
3. What would be the outcome if the conflict were handled differently?

2. Establishing the Purpose of the Lesson

The purpose of today's lesson is to help you understand how conflicts arise and explore effective strategies for resolving them. Through our previous activity, you'll reflect on real-life situations, consider the emotions involved, and discuss practical approaches to conflict resolution. These activities will help you develop the skills needed to manage disagreements in a healthy and productive way, while also considering your own well-being and the well-being of others.

Note: These questions can be adapted to either activity to promote deeper reflection and discussion on conflict management.

Mental Well-being in Conflict and Collaboration

In today's interconnected learning environments, students and educators frequently encounter situations that require both collaboration and conflict resolution. These interactions, while sometimes challenging, are essential for developing emotional intelligence, resilience, and a supportive classroom culture.

Understanding Conflict and Its Impact on Mental Well-being

Conflict is a natural part of human interaction, especially in diverse educational settings. It often arises from differences in perspectives, values, or goals. While conflict can be stressful, it also presents opportunities for growth when managed constructively. According to Melamed and Reiman (n.d.), conflict often stems from differing perceptions rather than objective truths. Recognizing this helps educators and students approach disagreements with empathy and openness.

Unresolved conflict, however, can negatively affect mental well-being. It may lead to anxiety, stress, and a breakdown in communication. Teachers and students alike may experience emotional exhaustion, which can impair learning and teaching effectiveness.

The Role of Collaboration in Promoting Mental Well-being

Collaboration, on the other hand, fosters a sense of belonging and shared purpose. When students work together toward common goals, they build trust, improve communication skills, and develop emotional resilience. Collaborative environments encourage mutual respect and reduce the likelihood of harmful conflict. Now, let's understand how your emotions or well-being impact the outcome of the conflict or collaboration you experienced? OPTION 1 “CONFLICT VS COLLABORATION” • The teacher will ask students to quickly list one situation where they had a conflict with someone and one where they worked well with others in a group. • Afterward, the teacher will ask a few students to share their examples. • The teacher will guide the discussion to highlight how well-being affects both conflict and teamwork. Processing Question: • How did your emotions or well-being impact the outcome of the conflict or collaboration you experienced? • What strategies or actions helped turn a challenging situation into a successful collaboration, and how can those be applied to resolving conflicts? OPTION 2 “WHAT DOES A HEALTHY RELATIONSHIP LOOK LIKE?” • The teacher will show two short scenarios: one where two people are in a conflict, and one where two people are collaborating successfully.	Note: This activity encourages students to think about the connection between emotional well-being and conflict resolution, helping them identify the importance of managing their emotions to build healthy relationships. Key Elements to Focus On: Emotions: Frustration, anger, and defensiveness. Actions: Interrupting, raising voices, unwillingness to compromise. Outcome: The project stalls, and both feel upset.

Note: This activity helps students reflect on their personal experiences with conflict and collaboration, setting the stage for exploring how managing emotions and well-being can influence these situations.

BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

- Students will discuss in pairs and distinguish which scenario looks healthier and why, focusing on the emotions, actions, and outcomes in each.
- After 5 minutes, the teacher will invite a few pairs to share their ideas with the class.

Sample scenario:

Scenario 1: Conflict

Situation:

Two friends, Alex and Jordan, are working on a school project together. They disagree on how to approach the topic. Alex feels that the project should focus on one aspect, while Jordan insists on covering a broader scope. During the discussion, they both raise their voices, interrupt each other, and seem frustrated. Neither is willing to compromise, and the tension continues to grow. The project isn't progressing, and they both leave feeling upset.

Scenario 2: Collaboration

Situation:

Emily and Sam are working on a group project together. They discuss their ideas respectfully and listen to each other's opinions. Emily suggests focusing on a specific aspect, and Sam agrees but suggests adding a different perspective. They work together to combine their ideas, assigning tasks to each other based on strengths. They check in with each other regularly and finish the project on time, feeling satisfied and proud of their work.

Key Elements to Focus On:

Emotions: Respect, understanding, and cooperation.

Actions: Active listening, compromise, assigning tasks based on strengths.

Outcome: Successful completion of the project, both feeling positive and accomplished.

	Guiding Questions: 1. Which scenario shows better communication and why? 2. How do the emotions and actions in each scenario affect the outcome?
B. Instituting New Knowledge	Now, to help us better understand conflict resolution, negotiation, and mediation styles, let's start by looking at a real-life example. What Makes a Conflict? Conflict is a natural and inevitable part of human interaction, especially in dynamic environments like schools. Understanding what makes a conflict is essential for fostering a healthy learning atmosphere and promoting mental well-being among students and staff. Defining Conflict A conflict arises when two or more individuals perceive that their goals, values, or needs are incompatible. It is not necessarily negative; rather, it is a signal that something needs attention or change. In educational settings, conflicts can occur between students, between teachers, or between students and teachers. These may stem from misunderstandings, competition, unmet expectations, or differences in communication styles.

According to Edutopia, conflict in schools often emerges from complex interpersonal dynamics and systemic issues. Avoiding conflict can lead to deeper problems, such as stress, disengagement, and a toxic school climate 1. Instead, recognizing the root causes of conflict allows educators to address issues constructively.

Sources of Conflict in the Classroom

- Differing Perspectives: Students and teachers come from diverse backgrounds, which can lead to different interpretations of behavior or expectations.
- Unmet Needs: When students feel unheard or unsupported, frustration can manifest as conflict.
- Power Dynamics: Conflicts may arise when students feel a lack of autonomy or when authority is perceived as unfair.
- Communication Breakdowns: Misunderstandings due to unclear instructions or emotional responses can escalate tensions.

1. Presenting Examples

Steps for Conflict Negotiation

Conflict negotiation is a vital skill in both academic and real-world settings. It involves guiding individuals or groups toward a peaceful resolution when disagreements arise. In the classroom, teaching students how to negotiate conflict not only improves relationships but also supports their emotional development and mental well-being.

According to the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), an effective three-step approach to conflict negotiation includes:

State the Behavior and Identify the Emotions

Begin by calmly describing what happened and helping students recognize their emotions. For example, “You both wanted the same toy, and now you’re feeling upset.”

Clarify the Problem

Encourage students to express their perspectives. Ask open-ended questions like, “What happened?” or “How did that make you feel?” This helps them understand the root of the conflict.

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education

Guide Toward a Solution

Support students in brainstorming fair solutions. Offer prompts such as, “What can we do so everyone feels okay?” or “Can we take turns?”

This structured approach helps students develop self-regulation, empathy, and communication skills—key components of successful conflict resolution

OPTION 1 "Role-Play Conflict Resolution"

- The teacher will give students a short real-life conflict scenario (e.g., two friends disagreeing on a group project or two coworkers arguing over a deadline).
- In pairs, students will role-play the scenario using different conflict resolution styles (e.g., avoiding, accommodating, compromising, competing, and collaborating).
- Afterward, the teacher will ask students to discuss which style worked best for the situation.

Processing Questions:

1. Which conflict resolution style helped resolve the situation most effectively and why?

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

2. How did the emotions of the people involved influence the outcome of the conflict?

OPTION 2 "Negotiation Challenge"

- The teacher will present a scenario where two students need to negotiate (e.g., agreeing on how to divide responsibilities in a group project).

Sample:

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

- The students will have 5 minutes to negotiate a fair solution, focusing on using negotiation strategies such as compromise and finding common ground.
- Afterward, the teacher will ask each pair to share their approach and discuss what made their negotiation successful or challenging.

Guiding Questions:

1. What negotiation strategies helped you reach an agreement?
2. What made the negotiation process challenging, and how did you overcome those challenges?

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

OPTION 1: "TEACHER-LED DISCUSSION"

- The teacher will present information about concepts based on materials from "The Simple Steps to Resolve Conflict" which guide to be a general compilation of conflict resolution strategies commonly found in various self-help and communication resources. The specific structure and wording—such as "Pause and Stay Calm," "Listen to Understand," "Express Yourself Honestly and Respectfully," "Find Common Ground," and "Agree and Move Forward"—are widely recognized principles in conflict resolution literature

Simple Steps to Resolve Conflict

1. Pause and Stay Calm

- Take a deep breath before reacting.
 - Walk away for a moment if you're too upset.
 - Give yourself and the other person time to cool down.
- "Pause before you respond. Not every action needs a reaction."

2. Listen to Understand

- Let the other person speak without interrupting.
 - Try to understand how they feel and what they need.
 - Use active listening (eye contact, nodding, paraphrasing).
- "Listen not to reply, but to understand."

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

3. Express Yourself Honestly and Respectfully

- Use “I” statements instead of blaming:
 - “I felt hurt when...”
 - “You always make me feel...”
- Speak clearly, calmly, and kindly.

4. Find Common Ground

- Ask: “What can we do to fix this together?”
- Brainstorm solutions that work for both sides.
- Be open to compromise.

5. Agree and Move Forward

- Agree on what each person will do differently.
- Say sorry if needed and mean it.
- Let go and move on — don't hold grudges.

- Students will write down key ideas from the teacher's discussion.
- After this, the teacher will facilitate the answering of processing questions.

Guiding Questions:

1. Which conflict resolution style or strategy do you think is most effective, and why?

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

2. How can understanding different conflict resolution styles help you manage conflicts in real-life situations?

OPTION 2 Conflict Resolution Strategies: Steps, Benefits, and Tips

- The teacher will present information about concepts based on materials from the Conflict Resolution Strategies: Steps, Benefits, and Tips by Jennifer Herrity.

Source: <https://www.indeed.com/career-advice/career-development/conflict-resolution-strategies>

A conflict often is a byproduct when there's human interaction, so responding professionally requires conflict-resolution strategies.

When a dispute arises, the best course of action is to use negotiation to resolve the problem.

<https://www.makingbusinessmatter.co.uk/thomas-kilman-conflict-model/>

The most common set of negotiation strategies, known as the Thomas-Kilman model, identifies five different approaches to resolution.

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

Guiding Questions:

1. How do the five negotiation strategies in the Thomas-Kilmann model differ from each other in terms of handling conflict?
2. Why is it important to choose the appropriate negotiation strategy based on the situation or conflict?

3. Developing Mastery

Now, are the concepts clear to understand the different methods and strategies for managing a conflict? Through the next activity, you will evaluate the appropriate use of conflict management strategies.

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

OPTION 1 CONFLICT RESOLUTION STRATEGY WORKSHEET
(Independent Practice)

- Students will individually complete a worksheet where they analyze a written conflict scenario.
- The worksheet will ask students to identify the conflict, the emotions involved, and the possible resolution strategies.
- Then students will select and explain which conflict resolution strategy (from the Thomas-Kilmann model) would be most appropriate and why.

- The teacher will review each student's responses to assess their understanding of the different strategies. Key questions for the worksheet could include:
 - a. What conflict resolution strategy would you apply to this situation?
 - b. Why do you think this strategy is the best option for resolving the conflict?
 - c. How could this strategy benefit the relationship between the people involved?

OPTION 2 Creative and Physically Active Role-Playing Conflict Resolution Scenarios

Let's bring conflict resolution to life with a fun, active twist! Get ready for a "Conflict Resolution Relay!"

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

- The teacher will give each group a conflict scenario (e.g., two friends disagreeing over a group project, or teammates arguing about a game strategy).
- Each group will create their version of the conflict using different conflict resolution strategies.

For student:

- You'll take turns acting out the scenario and applying a specific conflict resolution strategy (such as compromising, collaborating, avoiding, accommodating, or competing).
- The twist: one person will act out the conflict while another person will walk to a designated "Strategy Station" where they'll quickly pick the strategy to apply.
- Once they have it, they'll sprint back and give a short description of the strategy and how it fits the scenario.

Resolution in Motion:

- After each role-play, each group will quickly discuss which strategy worked best and why, then move on to the next scenario.
- The teacher will give feedback as you perform and provide suggestions to help improve your approach.
- Once finished the relay, student will reflect with a quick, energetic debrief. The teacher will ask:

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

	a. Which strategy did you pick and why? b. How did it change the way the conflict was resolved? c. Would you use the same strategy in a real-life situation? Why or why not?
C. Demonstrating Knowledge and Skills	1. Finding Practical Application OPTION 1 CONFLICT RESOLUTION DEBATE • The teacher will present a real-world conflict scenario (e.g., a disagreement between two coworkers over sharing tasks, or a disagreement in a group about project roles). • Students will be divided into two groups: one representing each side of the conflict. • Each group will discuss and choose a conflict resolution strategy that would help resolve the situation. • Groups will then have 2 minutes each to present their chosen strategy and explain how it would help solve the conflict effectively.	Note: The activity encourages students to engage with real-life conflicts while applying the strategies they have learned, and they provide a clear assessment of their understanding.

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

- After the debate, the teacher will ask students to reflect on:
 - a. Which conflict resolution strategy seemed most effective in this situation?
 - b. How did each side justify their approach, and what could be improved?

OPTION 2 CONFLICT RESOLUTION STATIONS

- The teacher will set up different "Conflict Resolution Stations" around the classroom, each with a different real-life conflict scenario (e.g., friends arguing about a movie choice, teammates disagreeing on a game strategy, classmates having different opinions in a group project).
- Students will rotate through each station in small groups (2-3 students per group).
- At each station, students will read the scenario and quickly decide which conflict resolution strategy (e.g., compromising, collaborating, avoiding, accommodating, competing) would work best.
- They will then role-play how they would apply that strategy to resolve the conflict.

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

- At the end of the activity, students will briefly share with the class which strategy they chose for each scenario and explain why it was the best fit. (Guiding Question)

2. Making Generalization

OPTION 1 “My Conflict & Collaboration Reflection Journal”

- Students will individually reflect on how mental well-being plays a role in conflict and collaboration by writing in their journals.
- Teacher will ask students to think about a recent situation where they were involved in a conflict or a collaborative project.
- They will take a few moments to write down:
 - a. How did the situation make you feel mentally and emotionally?
 - b. How did your mental well-being impact your response to the conflict or collaboration?
 - c. What strategies could you have used to improve the outcome?
- Students will then answer the following reflective prompt in the Learning Activity Sheet provided:

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

	a. What is one thing you could do to protect or improve your mental well-being in future conflicts or collaborative situations? • After the reflection, the teacher will invite a few students to share their thoughts with the class. • This will help the teacher gauge students' understanding of how mental well-being influences conflict and collaboration. Note: A Learning Activity Sheet (LAS) is provided for this assessment activity. OPTION 2 "Conflict Resolution Styles Reflection Circle" This activity encourages students to reflect on the different conflict resolution styles, negotiation, and mediation strategies they've learned. • The teacher will ask students to think of a recent conflict or disagreement they were part of and choose one of the following conflict resolution styles they used (competing, compromising, collaborating, avoiding, or accommodating). Questions to guide reflection: a. Which conflict resolution style did you use in the situation?	Note: Both activities help students reflect on their experiences and mental well-being during conflict, as well as develop a deeper understanding of conflict resolution strategies, negotiation, and mediation. Assessment Focus: • Application of conflict management skills
--	--	---

Republic of the Philippines
Department of Education
BUREAU OF LEARNING DELIVERY

	b. Did it help resolve the conflict, or did it make it worse? • Students will write down how they could have applied a different strategy (e.g., negotiation or mediation) and what the possible outcomes might have been. • In small groups, students will share their reflections with peers and discuss how different styles could be applied to the same conflict. • The teacher will assess students' understanding through group sharing and by listening for insights into how various strategies could impact conflict resolution and collaboration. 3. Evaluating Learning “Role-Play Performance Task (Group Work)” • In small groups (3–4 students), learners will be assigned a conflict scenario and must prepare and perform a role-play demonstrating how they would manage the conflict using negotiation and mediation techniques. • Roles should include the two conflicting parties and a mediator. • Each group will: a. Present the conflict clearly. b. Show a negotiation attempt between parties. c. Use a mediator if negotiation stalls. d. End with a resolution that reflects fair compromise and respect.	• Effective use of negotiation and mediation language • Teamwork and communication • Realistic and respectful resolution Note: These assessments combine both individual and group formats, allowing learners to demonstrate practical skills and deeper understanding of conflict resolution through negotiation and mediation.

	Note: Rubric for “Role-Play Performance Task (Group Work)” can be found on the annex page.
V. ASSESSMENT (Assessing Learnings)	In this summative assessment, learners will apply their understanding of conflict management and mental well-being by designing a Conflict Management Plan. Working individually or in pairs, students will create a plan based on a real-life or hypothetical scenario involving conflict in school, family, or the community. Using the provided Learning Worksheet, they will analyze the role of mental well-being in the situation, identify conflict resolution styles, propose a negotiation or mediation strategy, and reflect on how their plan promotes healthier relationships. To showcase their work, students will choose one of three presentation formats: a poster, slide deck, or a short skit or role-play, followed by a brief explanation. A scoring rubric will be used to assess their understanding, creativity, and application of concepts. Conflict Management Plan Presentation Task: Designing a Conflict Management Plan for Healthy Relationships Instructions: You will work individually or in pairs to create and present a Conflict Management Plan that promotes mental well-being and healthy relationships. Your plan should include: • A real-life or hypothetical conflict scenario (school, family, or community-based). • An analysis of how mental well-being affects the conflict and collaboration in the scenario. • Identification of conflict resolution styles used or recommended. • A step-by-step negotiation or mediation strategy to resolve the conflict. • A reflection on how the plan supports mental well-being and relationship building. You will present your plan through a poster, slide deck, or short skit, followed by a brief explanation. Note: A Learning Activity Sheet (LAS) is provided for this assessment activity.

Rubric: Role-Play Performance Task – Conflict Resolution

Criteria	4 – Excellent	3 – Proficient	2 – Developing	1 – Beginning
Clarity of Conflict Scenario	Conflict is clearly presented with context, emotions, and stakes well-established. Audience easily understands the issue.	Conflict is understandable and has context, though details may be basic or slightly unclear.	Conflict is somewhat vague or lacks necessary background/ context.	Conflict is unclear, unrealistic, or confusing to the audience.
Use of Negotiation Techniques	Parties use negotiation techniques effectively (active listening, “I” statements, finding common ground). Strategies are realistic and respectful.	Negotiation is evident and appropriate, though techniques may be inconsistently applied.	Some negotiation occurs, but it lacks depth or appropriate technique.	Minimal or ineffective negotiation; parties argue or ignore resolution strategies.
Role of Mediator	Mediator intervenes appropriately, demonstrating impartiality, guiding discussion, and helping reach resolution.	Mediator is present and contributes, but may lack confidence, neutrality, or clear strategy.	Mediator’s role is inconsistent or weak; offers limited guidance.	Mediator is missing or does not fulfill the role effectively.
Conflict Resolution Outcome	Ending reflects a realistic, fair, and respectful compromise; shows clear resolution process.	Resolution is reached and generally fair, though may lack detail or clarity.	Outcome is forced, one-sided, or unclear; shows limited compromise.	No clear resolution or resolution does not reflect understanding of negotiation/ mediation.
Team Collaboration & Role Execution	All members actively participate and remain in character; roles are performed convincingly and with teamwork.	Most members participate; roles are mostly clear and performance is cooperative.	Uneven participation; some roles unclear or weakly performed.	Poor teamwork; unclear roles or major imbalances in participation.
Creativity & Engagement	Scenario is engaging and	Performance is interesting and	Performance is somewhat flat;	Little effort in engagement;
