LESSON EXEMPLAR

Learning Area	Life and Career Skills	Grade Level	11
Semester	First Semester	Quarter	Quarter 2/ Week 3

I. OBJECTIVES (Identifying the Goals)

Content Standard	The learner demonstrates understanding of the value of interpersonal effectiveness in achieving social competence.
Performance Standard	The learner engages in collaborative work that showcases interpersonal effectiveness.
Learning Competencies	Apply interpersonal effectiveness, principles and practices in different social situations
II. REFERENCES and MATERIALS (Selecting Resources and Material)	Learner's Module: Personal Development, Senior High School, CG and TG Materials: Paper, markers, scissors, multimedia equipment, index cards, art supplies Online Resources: https://www.skillsyouneed.com/interpersonal-skills.html

(These shall be accomplished per topic)

III. CONTENT (Sequencing Content)	Interpersonal Effectiveness ● Core Skills of Interpersonal Effectiveness ● Barriers to Effective Interpersonal Relationships
IV. OBJECTIVES (Setting Clear Objectives and Analyzing the Tasks)	1. Identify core skills of interpersonal effectiveness to achieve effective interpersonal relationships 2. Describe interpersonal effectiveness 3. Exhibit core skills of interpersonal effectiveness in various social situation

IV. PROCEDURES	ANNOTATION

A. Activating Prior Knowledge	OPTION 1: KNOWING MYSELF THROUGH OTHERS Each student will choose a partner—this can be a friend, groupmate, or seatmate. The partner will then write on a small piece of paper about the positive and negative traits they observe or know about the person they were paired with. This activity aims to promote self-awareness and constructive feedback. Process Questions: 1. What are your thoughts about the activity? How did you feel when you received feedback about your positive and negative traits? 2. How well did you think others knew you before the activity? What new things did they learn about you afterward? OPTION 2: THE CHARACTER PROJECT Students will design and create a paper doll that reflects the characteristics of their friends, classmates, or group mates. Once the dolls are completed, students will present their creations to the class, explaining how each design reflects the personality traits of the individual they chose. Process Question: 1. What personal traits or values does your doll represent, and why did you choose to highlight them? 2. How do the colors, symbols, or accessories you used reflect their personality? 3. Which part of your doll best expresses its strengths or unique qualities? 4. Was it easy or difficult to represent them through a doll? Why? 5. How did this activity help you better understand your chosen classmate?	OPTION 1: Knowing Myself through Others (Annotation: This task taps intrapersonal intelligence and builds self-awareness—critical for understanding interpersonal dynamics. It encourages metacognition and perspective-taking.) OPTION 2: THE CHARACTER PROJECT (Annotation: This activity engages visual-spatial and intrapersonal learners. It fosters creativity and facilitates self-expression, a foundation for interpersonal understanding.) Purpose: This activity aims to help students get to know more about themselves by reflecting on how others perceive their traits. By associating personal characteristics with visual representations and feedback from peers, learners develop greater self-awareness and appreciation for their unique identity within social contexts.

B. Instituting New Knowledge	DISCUSSION: INTERPERSONAL EFFECTIVENESS DISCUSSION A: Key Aspects of Interpersonal Effectiveness Definition: Interpersonal effectiveness refers to skills that allow individuals to interact in a way that promotes positive outcomes and strong relationships, while maintaining respect for both them and others. Key Aspects Include: • Communication: Expressing needs clearly, active listening, assertive but respectful expression. • Empathy and Perspective-Taking: Understanding and acknowledging others' feelings and viewpoints. • Conflict Resolution: Addressing disagreements constructively, aiming for win-win solutions. • Building and Maintaining Relationships: Creating healthy boundaries and managing social interactions positively. • Self-Awareness: Recognizing one's values, beliefs, emotions, and their impact on others. WHY IS INTERPERSONAL EFFECTIVENESS IMPORTANT? Improved relationships: Stronger connections with family, friends, and colleagues lead to greater satisfaction and well-being. • Increased self-esteem and confidence: Successfully navigating social interactions and achieving desired outcomes can boost self-confidence. • Enhanced communication and collaboration:	Annotation: Teachers should use direct instruction combined with student engagement strategies such as think-pair-share and real-life scenario sharing. Encourage learners to provide personal examples or role-play short situations to reinforce each concept.

	Effective communication leads to better understanding and cooperation in both personal and professional settings. • Improved problem-solving and conflict resolution: Strong interpersonal skills allow individuals to address challenges more effectively and find solutions that satisfy everyone involved Effective interpersonal relationships are built on clear communication, mutual understanding, and trust. However, several factors can act as barriers to these relationships, hindering the flow of information and leading to misunderstandings or conflicts. These barriers can be broadly categorized as psychological, emotional, cultural, and physical. EXAMPLES OF INTERPERSONAL EFFECTIVENESS IN ACTION: Assertively requesting a favor: Clearly stating a need and the desired outcome while being respectful of the other person. • Negotiating a compromise in a conflict: Understanding the perspectives of all parties and finding a solution that works for everyone. • Setting a boundary with a colleague: Politely declining an unreasonable request while maintaining a positive working relationship. • Offering empathy and support to a friend: Recognizing and acknowledging their emotions and offering comfort or practical assistance. PSYCHOLOGICAL BARRIERS: These stem from internal factors such as: • Prejudice and bias: Existing biases or stereotypes can distort perceptions and prevent objective understanding. • Fear of judgment or criticism:	Annotation: Have students reflect individually or in pairs. Annotation: Present brief scenarios that show interpersonal breakdowns. Let learners identify the underlying factor or myth, then discuss how it could be improved.
--	--	---

	This can prevent individuals from expressing their true thoughts and feelings. • Emotional dysregulation: Strong emotions like anger, anxiety, or fear can hinder communication and create emotional distance. • Defensiveness: This can make it difficult to receive feedback and can lead to misunderstandings or conflict. Emotional Barriers: These relate to the intensity and management of emotions, including: • Emotional overload: Being overwhelmed by emotions can make it difficult to communicate effectively. • Lack of empathy: The inability to understand or share another person's feelings can create distance and misunderstandings. • Emotional reactivity: Over-reacting to situations can damage relationships and hinder communication. CULTURAL BARRIERS: These arise from differences in values, beliefs, and communication styles: • Language differences: Misunderstandings can occur when people don't share a common language or have different dialects. • Cultural norms and expectations: Different cultures have varying rules for communication, behavior, and social interaction, which can lead to misunderstandings. • Lack of cultural awareness: A lack of understanding of other cultures can lead to stereotypes, biases, and misunderstandings.

	PHYSICAL BARRIERS: These are external factors that impede communication: • Noise or distractions: Physical noise or other distractions can make it difficult to hear or understand what is being said. • Distance: Physical distance can create a sense of separation and hinder face-to-face communication. • Technology limitations: Technical glitches or difficulties with using communication technology can also create barriers. OVERCOMING THESE BARRIERS REQUIRES PROACTIVE EFFORTS, SUCH AS: • Active listening: Pay attention to what others are saying and ask clarifying questions. • Emotional regulation: Learn to manage your emotions and communicate effectively even when emotions are high. • Cultural sensitivity: Be open-minded and respectful of cultural differences. • Clear and concise communication: Use clear language and avoid jargon or technical terms. • Seeking feedback: Ask for feedback and be open to constructive criticism. Why Is Interpersonal Effectiveness Important? • Enhances relationships and collaboration • Builds self-confidence and emotional intelligence • Improves communication and conflict resolution • Promotes mutual respect and understanding	Annotation: Conduct a peer-pair discussion or interactive quiz.

Examples of Interpersonal Effectiveness in Action:

- Asking for help assertively and respectfully
- Resolving a misunderstanding by listening actively
- Setting healthy boundaries with peers or teammates
- Comforting a friend by validating their emotions

FORMATIVE ASSESSMENT A

“Describe a recent situation where you showed interpersonal effectiveness. What skill did you use, and what was the result?”

DISCUSSION B: Barriers and Misconceptions in Interpersonal EffectivenessFactors That Get in the Way:*1. Fear of Rejection or Conflict

- People may avoid speaking up or setting boundaries because they’re afraid of being disliked, rejected, or starting an argument.

2. Low Self-Esteem

- If someone doesn’t value their own thoughts or feelings, they may struggle to assert themselves or believe they deserve respect.

3. Strong Emotions (e.g., Anger, Anxiety)

- Intense emotions can cloud judgment and lead to impulsive or aggressive communication.

4. Lack of Communication Skills

- Without training or experience, a person might not know how to express themselves clearly and respectfully.

5. Poor Listening

- Effective interaction isn't just about talking — not listening well can damage trust and cause misunderstandings.

6. Cultural or Family Background

- Some people grow up in environments where open communication isn't encouraged, making assertiveness feel uncomfortable or wrong.

7. Desire to Please Others (People-Pleasing)

- Always putting others first can lead to neglecting one's own needs, which harms self-respect and builds resentment.

8. Negative Past Experiences

- If someone was ignored, judged, or punished for being honest in the past, they may fear repeating that pain.

Common Myths That Get in the Way of Interpersonal Effectiveness

Many people struggle with interpersonal skills not because they lack ability, but because they believe certain myths that hold them back. These false beliefs can prevent effective communication and healthy relationships.

- ◇ 1. "Being assertive is the same as being rude or aggressive."
 - Truth: Assertiveness means expressing your needs respectfully — not attacking or dominating others.
- ◇ 2. "If I say no, people won't like me."
 - Truth: Setting boundaries actually earns respect. People-pleasing can lead to resentment and burnout.
- ◇ 3. "I shouldn't have to ask — if they cared, they'd just know."
 - Truth: Others can't read your mind. Clear, direct communication is more respectful and effective.
- ◇ 4. "Conflict is always bad and should be avoided."

	● Truth: Healthy conflict can lead to growth, understanding, and stronger relationships. ◇ 5. “My needs are less important than others’.” ● Truth: Everyone’s needs matter equally. Ignoring your needs damages self-respect and trust. ◇ 6. “If I give in once, I’ll always have to give in.” ● Truth: Flexibility isn’t weakness — compromise can build cooperation and mutual respect. FORMATIVE ASSESSMENT B “Match each scenario to a barrier or myth. What could have been done differently?” OPTION 1: Role Play Instruction: The teacher may ask for volunteers or select learners to perform the scenarios. After the performance, learners shall be asked on their thoughts or ideas on how to demonstrate interpersonal effectiveness based on the presentation. SITUATION A Maria approaches James during a break and says: "Hi James, I know you're busy, and I really respect how well you manage your time. I'm working on the Q3 report and I'm hitting a wall with the financial projections section. You're great with that part, and I'd really appreciate your insight. If you could spare even 15 minutes today to help me review it, I'd greatly appreciate it—but I completely understand if your schedule doesn't allow it.	OPTION 1: Role Play (Annotation: Uses experiential learning to practice real-life communication scenarios. Students reflect on their use of empathy, assertiveness, and active listening.)

	SITUATION B “Hi, I wanted to talk about our project. I’ve noticed that some tasks haven’t been completed, and I understand we’re all juggling a lot. I think it might help if we revisit our task division and clarify responsibilities. That way, things feel fair for everyone, and we can work more efficiently toward the best outcome.” SITUATION C Hey, I’ve noticed during the last few games, you’ve been taking most of the shots yourself. I know you’re trying to help us win, and I respect your skills. But I think the team works best when we all get to contribute. Let’s try to pass more and play as a team — it’ll give us a better shot at winning OPTION 2: Empathy Circle 1. Arrange students in a circle. 2. One student shares a personal challenge or emotional experience (e.g., feeling misunderstood, having a conflict with a friend). 3. The next student practices empathy, responding with understanding and compassion rather than offering solutions. 4. Continue the circle with each student offering empathetic responses. 5. Afterward, debrief: How did it feel to show empathy and express yourself clearly? How do you think your communication affected the other person, helped resolve any issues, and supported your relationship with them?	OPTION 2: Empathy Circle (Annotation: Encourages emotional intelligence and active listening. The activity builds community in the classroom and allows learners to experience empathy firsthand.)
--	---	--

C. Demonstrating Knowledge and Skills	The Communication Bridge Instructions: Setup: Divide the class into teams of 4–6 students. Each team is split into two groups (Group A and Group B) seated back-to-back. Give Group A a simple picture or design (e.g., a basic geometric pattern or block structure made of colored paper). Group B receives blank paper and colored materials. Task: Group A describes the picture using verbal instructions only—they cannot show the picture. Group B listens and attempts to recreate the picture as accurately as possible. No one can look at the other group’s paper. Debrief Compare the original and recreated pictures. Making Generalization Answer the following question: 1. What are the barriers to effective interpersonal relationship you experienced? 2. What interpersonal skills helped your team succeed? Evaluating Learning Direction: Read each of the following statements carefully. Identify which key aspect of interpersonal effectiveness is needed to address the type of barrier indicated. Choose the letter of the correct answer. A. Communication B. Empathy/ Perspective Taking	The Communication Bridge (Annotation: Engages verbal and visual learners. Encourages teamwork and highlights communication barriers, reinforcing key concepts through simulation.) Making Generalization What are the barriers to effective interpersonal relationships you experienced? What interpersonal skills helped your team succeed? Quiz (Multiple Choice) (Annotation: Formative assessment checks conceptual understanding in a low-stakes format. Also reinforces retention of key terms.)

	C. Conflict Resolution D. Building and Maintaining Relationships E. Self-Awareness - Existing biases or stereotypes can distort perceptions and prevent objective understanding. - This can prevent individuals from expressing their true thoughts and feelings. - Being overwhelmed by emotions can make it difficult to communicate effectively. - Misunderstandings can occur when people don't share a common language or have different dialects. - Different cultures have varying rules for communication, behavior, and social interaction, which can lead to misunderstandings. - A lack of understanding of other cultures can lead to stereotypes, biases, and misunderstandings. - Physical noise or other distractions can make it difficult to hear or understand what is being said. - Physical distance can create a sense of separation and hinder face-to-face communication. - Technical glitches or difficulties with using communication technology can also create barriers. - Over-reacting to situations can damage relationships and hinder communication.
	ADDITIONAL ACTIVITIES: SHARING IS CARING During a group project in school, two of my teammates had a disagreement. One felt that their ideas weren't being considered, while the other was frustrated because they believed the project was not	Annotation: The teacher gathers ideas from the learner/s based on their experiences and provides justification or feedback to support and guide their answers.

	going according to plan. This tension was starting to affect the overall progress of the group, and I could sense that it was making the atmosphere uncomfortable. Considering you are a part of this scenario how will you solve the situation applying your interpersonal effectiveness?	Teachers may facilitate this part through both discussion and group activity. Begin by presenting the examples using short role-plays or situational readings. Then, have students work in small groups to reflect on the examples and present their insights. Each student's ideas should be welcomed and respected, ensuring that interpersonal effectiveness is practiced through active listening, open communication, and mutual respect.
V. ASSESSMENT (Assessing Learnings)	The teacher will use portfolio assessment, where students will compile their completed tasks as evidence of their understanding of the topic and the skills they have developed. Portfolio Assessment Students will compile their outputs including: Trait lists from "Knowing Myself" Character Project Role play scripts or reflections Quiz result Journal reflections

	Rubrics will be used to evaluate creativity, clarity, participation, and understanding of interpersonal effectiveness.
	Criteria	Excellent (4)	Proficient (3)	Developing (2)	Beginning (1)
	Creativity	Highly original and engaging presentation; clear effort in design and delivery	Presentation shows creativity with some original elements	Minimal creative elements; presentation is somewhat generic	Lacks creativity or effort; presentation is unclear or incomplete
	Clarity of Message	Message is clear and strongly illustrates interpersonal effectiveness	Message is mostly clear and relevant	Message is unclear in parts or lacks focus	Message is confusing or does not relate to the topic
	Participation	All group members actively contributed and showed engagement	Most group members participated; few needed prompting	Some members contributed little; unequal workload	Majority of group did not participate meaningfully
	Understanding of the Concept	Demonstrates excellent understanding of interpersonal effectiveness	Shows good understanding with minor gaps	Shows partial understanding; needs clarification	Limited or incorrect understanding of the topic
VI. REFLECTION (Feedback and Continuous Improvement)	This section presents the key highlights and challenges encountered by both teachers and learners during the teaching-learning process throughout the unit. It also includes the adjustments made by the teacher to improve instruction. Teacher's Reflection: Guide Questions: Teacher's Reflection Which interpersonal skills did students identify most clearly, and how can I support deeper understanding of the others? Did my strategies help students form a clear and accurate understanding of interpersonal effectiveness?

	3. How effectively did students demonstrate interpersonal skills during the activity, and what can I do to improve future opportunities for practice? Learner's Feedback 1. Which interpersonal skill did learners learn and why is it important to them? 2. In their own words, what does interpersonal effectiveness mean?
VII. ADDITIONAL ACTIVITIES (Enrichment and Remediation)	Activity 1: Reflection Journal Write a one-page journal entry describing a recent conflict and how you handled it. Identify what you did well and what you could improve. Activity 2: Interview Task Interview a family member about their communication style. Summarize the results and reflect on how it affects your relationship. Sample Rubric – Reflection Journal
	Depth of Reflection	Provides deep and thoughtful insight into personal behavior and learning	Shows thoughtful reflection with some personal insight	Basic reflection; limited personal analysis	Lacks reflection or insight; mostly descriptive
	Connection to Concepts	Clearly applies interpersonal effectiveness concepts to the situation	Concepts are applied, though may not be consistently integrated	Minimal or unclear application of concepts	No clear connection to interpersonal effectiveness
	Organization & Clarity	Well-organized and clearly written; easy to follow	Generally organized; minor clarity issues	Somewhat disorganized; ideas are hard to follow at times	Disorganized or confusing; difficult to understand

	Grammar & Mechanics	Free of errors	Few minor errors	Noticeable errors that affect readability	Frequent errors that hinder understanding
	Sample Rubric – Interview Task
	Criteria	Excellent (4)	Proficient (3)	Developing (2)	Beginning (1)
	Interview Quality	Questions are thoughtful and responses are detailed and relevant	Questions are appropriate; responses are mostly relevant	Some questions lack depth; responses are brief	Poorly constructed interview; irrelevant or incomplete answers
	Summary & Reflection	Insightful summary and meaningful reflection on the experience	Clear summary with basic reflection	Limited reflection; mainly descriptive	Little to no reflection; summary lacks clarity
	Understanding of Concepts	Strong integration of interpersonal communication concepts	Concepts are mentioned and somewhat explained	Weak or minimal connection to concepts	No evident understanding of interpersonal concepts
	Presentation	Clear, organized, and well-written	Mostly clear and organized	Some disorganization or unclear parts	Poorly written or confusing
